Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.17% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

The company's auditor does not disclose considering climate and it is not clear whether they assessed climate-related risks associated with a 1.5C scenario. As such it is recommended to oppose the re-appointment of the auditor.

SHELL PLC AGM - 20-05-2025

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit & Finance Committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the Chair of the Audit & Finance Committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. 4.. Shareholder Resolution: Advisory Vote on Report Related to Oversight of Advertising Risks

Proponent Shareholder: A shareholder coalition led by Bowyer Research on behalf of the Bahnsen Family Trust

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests that McDonald's produce a report evaluating its oversight of advertising related risks, particularly those involving the alleged suppression or exclusion of viewpoints based on political or religious affiliations. The resolution claims that McDonald's, through participation in the Global Alliance for Responsible Media (GARM), contributed to industry wide censorship by aligning with agencies and associations that promoted content moderation frameworks based on subjective criteria like "disinformation," "insensitive," or "debated sensitive social issues." Citing the high concentration of ad-buying power within GARM and its subsequent dissolution following public scrutiny and a lawsuit from X (formerly Twitter), the proposal argues that such alliances present legal and reputational risks. The proponents point to practices that may amount to viewpoint discrimination and express concern about McDonald's association with organisations like the Global Disinformation Index and NewsGuard. They contend that greater transparency is necessary to assure shareholders and the public that advertising decisions align with principles of free speech and religious liberty. By evaluating these risks and practices, McDonald's can protect brand integrity and legal standing while rebuilding public trust.

Company's Response: McDonald's Board recommends a vote against the proposal, asserting that the requested report is unnecessary due to the company's existing risk management and advertising governance structures. The Board emphasises that McDonald's advertising strategy is centered around customer experience, value, cultural relevance, and brand trust, and is guided by its "Feel-Good Marketing" approach. Oversight of advertising is embedded in the company's leadership structure through its Chief Marketing Officer and Chief Impact Officer, with cross functional executive involvement. The company highlights that its global marketing decisions, including those made by franchisees, are made independently and grounded in brand safety, not political alignment. The Board also points to the enterprise risk management (ERM) framework which monitors reputational and strategic risks, including those associated with marketing, and involves escalation to the CEO and the Board when warranted. McDonald's states that it already provides appropriate oversight and transparency, and the requested evaluation would be duplicative and not materially beneficial to shareholders. The Board concludes that its current governance systems are sufficient to address the concerns raised and therefore recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: The proposal requests additional disclosures regarding how McDonald's oversees risks related to alleged viewpoint discrimination in its advertising decisions. While transparency around advertising and brand safety policies can contribute to accountability and reputational risk management, this particular resolution raises concerns. It originates from a right-wing advocacy group and reflects broader campaigns aimed at curbing corporate alignment with environmental, social, or governance (ESG) standards under the banner of defending free speech and religious freedom. The language and rationale of the proposal - including references to political and religious viewpoint protection indicate that it is intended to discourage companies from participating in industry-wide brand safety frameworks or ESG aligned advertising partnerships. These types of proposals have increasingly been used as spoiler or reactionary resolutions, aiming to limit companies' engagement with responsible business practices, particularly on social or ethical issues. McDonald's has already articulated a risk oversight structure that includes advertising practices, and its existing governance mechanisms appear sufficient to address relevant brand and reputational risks. Given the ideological nature of the resolution and its limited potential to enhance long-term shareholder value, opposition is recommended.

6.. Shareholder Resolution: Advisory Vote to Revisit DEI in Executive Compensation

Proponent Shareholder: National Legal and Policy Center

Proponent's argument: The National Legal and Policy Center (NLPC) requests that McDonald's Board revisit its executive compensation policies and consider eliminating DEI-based performance metrics from incentive plans. The proposal cites growing legal and reputational risks following the 2023 U.S. Supreme Court decision on affirmative action, which has triggered a broader reassessment of DEI initiatives across institutions and corporations. NLPC argues that linking executive pay to diversity quotas such as McDonald's goals for women and underrepresented groups in leadership, and for supplier diversity may expose the company to litigation under anti-discrimination statutes, particularly Title VII of the Civil Rights Act. The proposal claims that DEI-linked incentives could constitute discriminatory practices, and points to recent high-profile lawsuits as evidence of mounting liability and scrutiny. It further asserts that McDonald's current structure, which allocates 15% of short-term incentive plan payouts to human capital metrics, lacks sufficient GAAP basis and may open the door to regulatory or compliance challenges. The resolution calls for greater caution and urges a compensation review that removes DEI as a performance metric to reduce legal exposure and restore neutrality in executive pay structures.

Company's Response: The Board recommends a vote against the proposal, stating that it is unnecessary and overly prescriptive. The Compensation Committee already conducts a comprehensive annual review of executive compensation, with input from shareholders and independent consultants, to ensure alignment with the company's strategy and long-term shareholder value creation. The Committee's approach includes evaluation of both financial and non-financial metrics, including those that reflect progress on values such as inclusion and community impact. McDonald's emphasises that these metrics are consistent with its business priorities and strategic goals, and are adjusted yearly to reflect current priorities. For example, in 2024 and 2025, a Strategic Scorecard was introduced to capture qualitative efforts around culture, franchising, and inclusion. The company argues that shareholders have generally supported its Say-on-Pay proposals, and the Committee maintains full independence and expertise to set appropriate metrics. The Board also expresses concern that adopting the proposal would undermine the Committee's business judgment and flexibility to adapt pay structures. As such, the Board concludes the resolution would not benefit shareholders and recommends voting against it.

PIRC analysis: Increased scrutiny of how ESG factors are embedded into executive pay is appropriate and, in principle, greater transparency and alignment of performance incentives with long-term sustainability goals can benefit shareholders. However, this resolution appears to be ideologically driven and rooted in a flawed interpretation of fiduciary and legal risk. The proponent seeks to eliminate DEI-related metrics from compensation structures, presenting them as inherently discriminatory and legally dubious, while offering no evidence that the company's current practices violate existing law or materially harm shareholder value. The proposal mischaracterises DEI goals as "quotas" and frames human capital management as a legal liability, overlooking the substantial body of evidence that suggests companies with strong diversity strategies perform better over time and face lower reputational and governance risks. Moreover, McDonald's has clearly disclosed that its human capital metrics are subject to annual review by an independent Compensation Committee and represent a small portion of short-term incentives. The resolution would inappropriately restrict board discretion and undermine evolving best practice in human capital oversight. On balance, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

6.. Amend Certificate of Incorporation to Reflect New Delaware Law Provisions Regarding Officer Exculpation

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuade shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

14. Issuance of Shares for Existing Incentive Plan

Proposal to authorise the Board to grant performance shares to employees and senior management, including Executive Directors, under the long-term incentive plan. Shares will vest after three years, subject to performance conditions based 80% on financial criteria and 20% on CSR targets. While the metrics are disclosed, performance thresholds are not fully quantified, limiting transparency. However, shareholders will have the opportunity to vote separately on the remuneration report and individual executive pay outcomes under other resolutions. The use of performance-based equity is welcomed, as it promotes alignment between executives and shareholders. On balance, support is recommended.

INTERNATIONAL WORKPLACE GROUP PLC AGM - 20-05-2025

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Disclosure: All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group, which raises concerns about excessiveness.

Balance: Total variable pay for the year under review is not considered excessive at 137% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered to be acceptable at 37:1. It is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

Rating: AD, opposition is recommended.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

The 2024 remuneration policy for IWG plc introduced several key changes to its incentive schemes. The maximum annual bonus opportunity was increased from 150% to 200% of salary, with a reduction in the deferral requirement from 50% to 20% for executives who meet the 300% shareholding guideline, while clawback and malus provisions remain unchanged. For long-term incentives, the maximum award was raised from 250% to 300% of salary, with added flexibility for the Remuneration Committee to grant awards under either a Performance Share Plan (PSP) or Restricted Share Plan (RSP), depending on context. A performance multiplier of up to 1.33x was also introduced for PSPs, triggered by exceptional relative shareholder returns. The structure of vesting and holding periods remains largely unchanged, preserving the three-year vesting and two-year holding pattern for PSPs and a three-year vesting with performance underpin for RSPs.

Rating: ADC, hence opposition is recommended.

4. Approve DBSP

It is proposed to approve the Deferred Bonus Share Plan 2025 of International Workplace Group plc, which allows for the deferral of discretionary bonuses into share-based awards-either as Conditional Awards or Options-that vest after three years and may include dividend equivalents. The plan incorporates standard governance features such as a 10% dilution cap over ten years, malus and clawback provisions, and requirements for shareholder approval of material amendments. However, the plan does not impose a cap on overall variable remuneration, meaning total awards across all schemes could exceed 200% of base salary. Opposition is recommended on the grounds of excessive total variable pay potential.

Results: For: 99.7, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 0.2,

5. Approve PSP

It is proposed to approve the Performance Share Plan of International Workplace Group plc, under which share-based awards may be granted to executives subject to performance conditions and potential holding periods. The plan allows awards in the form of Conditional Awards or Options, with dividend equivalents and a vesting structure that typically spans five years. Governance features include a 10% dilution cap over ten years, malus and clawback provisions, and a maximum award limit of 300% of salary (with RSP awards valued at double). However, the cumulative effect of this and other plans permits total variable remuneration to exceed 200% of base salary. Opposition is recommended on the grounds of excessive total variable pay potential.

Vote Cast: Oppose

Results: For: 78.1, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 21.8,

6. Approve RSP

It is proposed to approve the Restricted Share Plan of International Workplace Group plc, which allows for the grant of Conditional Awards and Options that may be subject to performance or time-based vesting conditions, typically over a five-year holding period. The plan includes standard features such as dividend equivalents, malus and clawback provisions, and a 10% dilution limit over ten years. Awards under this plan are capped at 300% of salary in conjunction with the Performance Share Plan, with RSP awards valued at double. However, when aggregated with other schemes, the structure allows total variable remuneration to exceed 200% of salary. Opposition is recommended on the grounds of excessive total variable pay potential.

7. Approve SOP

It is proposed to approve the Share Option Plan 2025 of International Workplace Group plc, which establishes a broad umbrella structure for granting Options to acquire shares (or in some cases, cash equivalents) to employees across multiple jurisdictions. Options may be performance-based or time-based, vest after a minimum of three years, and must be exercised within ten years. The plan includes provisions for malus and clawback, caps total issuance under all employee plans to 10% over ten years, and provides flexibility through country-specific sub-plans. However, there is no firm cap on cumulative variable remuneration, allowing combined awards under this and other plans to exceed 200% of salary. Opposition is recommended on the grounds of excessive total variable pay potential.

It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

As there is no Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimise material risks linked to sustainability. The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. 4.. Amend Existing Omnibus Plan

It is proposed to amend the 2022 Omnibus Incentive Plan. [Detail any and all amendments to the scheme].

There are concerns with the Plan as it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. In addition, maximum award limits are excessive. As a result, opposition is recommended.

The current Board has an adequate level of independence, making it better placed to represent the interests of minority shareholders. In addition, with the assistance of an external search firm, Board has included two new nominees on its slate, which is welcomed. As it is only possible to support one slate, it is recommended to oppose Elliott's nominees.

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nominating/Governance Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Nominating/Governance committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating/Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. AMAZON.COM INC. AGM - 21-05-2025

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to oppose is recommended.

Several issues at governance level are still current during the year under review, which highlight lack of proper oversight and may lead to potential legal, financial, or reputational consequences. 5.. Shareholder Resolution: Respect Civil Liberties in Advertising Services

Proponent: Oklahoma Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust, represented by Bowyer Research.

Proponent's argument: This shareholder proposal addresses freedom of expression and discrimination in digital advertising, particularly in relation to Amazon's affiliations with external content moderation initiatives. The resolution calls on Amazon to evaluate and report on how it manages risks of discrimination against ad buyers or sellers based on political or religious viewpoints. The proponent argues that Amazon's involvement with the Global Alliance for Responsible Media (GARM) and related initiatives has potentially exposed the company to serious reputational, legal, and ethical risks. The resolution claims: "Amazon colluded with the world's largest advertising buyers... to demonetize platforms... for expressing disfavored political and religious viewpoints". GARM's mission to address "hate speech, bullying and disinformation" is described as a cover for vague and subjective censorship, with platforms judged on their handling of "debated sensitive social issues". It cites GARM's promotion of groups like NewsGuard and Global Disinformation Index, accusing them of labelling mainstream outlets as "disinformation". Specific actions, such as the GARM-coordinated pressure against Joe Rogan and Elon Musk's X, are presented as evidence of partisan bias and censorship pressure. The proponent asserts that these practices persist even after GARM's disbandment in 2024, with the "Big Six" agencies continuing similar policies. They conclude that Amazon's association with such groups may violate antitrust and anti-discrimination laws, and urge the company to "rebuild trust by providing transparency around these policies". The resolution asks Amazon's board to produce a report assessing how it oversees risks related to discrimination against ad buyers and sellers based on political or religious views.

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. Amazon recommends voting against the proposal. The company states that its policies are not designed to influence or suppress political or religious content. Rather, the goal is for "customers to experience relevant and useful ads", and to reach them effectively regardless of platform. "These policies and practices are not intended to promote or demote particular political or religious viewpoints". Amazon emphasizes its commitment to inclusivity, noting that it "serves customers, advertisers, and publishers that reflect a very broad range of viewpoints". The company asserts that it already maintains "robust risk management processes", including the oversight by the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee, which manages issues of human rights and ethical practices, and the Audit Committee, which handles broader operational risk assessments. It concludes that its existing governance mechanisms adequately address the concerns raised, and additional reporting is unnecessary.

PIRC Recommendation: The resolution frames complex advertising ecosystem decisions as conspiratorial ("colluded with... agencies") and treats voluntary brand alignment decisions as ideologically motivated suppression. In doing so, it advances a narrow conception of "free speech" that equates the lack of monetization with censorship, despite no legal or operational requirement for companies to fund or platform all content. The proposal is based on a selective and ideological reading of corporate responsibility and misrepresents Amazon's advertising strategy as politically motivated. The company already has appropriate oversight structures, and further reporting on this basis would entrench false narratives, distract from legitimate governance, and risk misuse of shareholder proposals for ideological agendas. Opposition is recommended.

SWATCH GROUP AG AGM - 21-05-2025

1.1. Approve Financial Statements

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are serious concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to oppose this resolution.

1.2. Receive the Sustainability Report

The Sustainability Report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are serious concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. Opposition is recommended.

2. Discharge the Management Board

Approval is sought to release the members of the Board regarding their activities in the Financial Year under review. The Company does not have an established whistle-blower hotline. It is considered that without a whistle-blower hotline, the company is potentially subject to reputational and financial damage by a lack of supervision of potential malpractice. For this reason, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

4.3. Approve Variable Remuneration of Executive Directors in the Amount of CHF 6.8675 Million

It is proposed to approve the prospective remuneration for members of the Executive Management of the Company, which means that the proposed amount will not be the actual amount to be paid, but only the total remuneration cap. It is proposed to approve the prospective remuneration for members of the Executive Management of the Company, which means that the proposed amount will not be the actual amount to be paid, but only the total remuneration cap. The voting outcome of this resolution will be binding for the Company.

It is proposed to fix the remuneration of members of the Executive Committee until next AGM at CHF 6.8675 million (CHF 7.452 million was proposed last year). This proposal includes fixed and variable remuneration components.

There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, opposition is recommended based on excessiveness concerns.

Vote Cast: Oppose

4.4. Approve Variable Remuneration of Executive Committee in the Amount of CHF 8.370 Million

Approve Variable Remuneration of members of the Executive Management of the Company, which means that the proposed amount will not be the actual amount to be paid, but only the cap for the variable remuneration component. The voting outcome of this resolution will be binding for the Company.

It is proposed to fix the remuneration of members of the Executive Committee until next AGM at CHF 8.370 million. The Company submitted two separate proposals for Executives fixed and variable remuneration, which is welcomed. With this separation, if shareholders rejected the variable compensation at a future potential retrospective proposal, the Company may nevertheless pay fixed salaries. The Ordinance Against Excessive Payments provides that if compensation is not approved, it may not be paid.

Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

5.1. Re-elect Nayla Hayek - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair Member of the Remuneration Committee and Chair of the Audit Committee. The Company does not have an established whistle-blowing hotline. It is considered that without a whistle-blowing hotline, the company is potentially subject to reputational and financial damage by a lack of supervision of potential malpractice. It is considered the responsibility of the audit committee to review all reports from the whistle-blowing hotline.

It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and in addition, the Audit Committee should be fully independent.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

As there is no Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5.2. Re-elect Ernst Tanner - Vice Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Director Member of the Audit Committee and Chair of the Remuneration Committee. Not considered to be independent as he has served on the Board for more than nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board, the audit and remuneration committees should not have non-independent members. It is considered that the Chair of the Remuneration Committee is responsible for the company's remuneration report and policies, and owing to concerns with the company's remuneration practices, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5.3. Re-elect Daniela Aeschlimann - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and member of the Audit and Remuneration Committees. Not considered independent as she is a representative of the Ammann families (pension funds, foundations and individuals, Madisa AG). It is considered that the Audit and Remuneration Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members. Regardless of the independent representation on the Board as a whole, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5.4. Re-elect Georges Nicolas Hayek - Chief Executive

Chief Executive Officer and Member of the Audit and Remuneration Committees. It is considered best practice that the Audit and Remuneration committees should consist of a majority of independent non-executive directors, excluding Executive Directors from its membership. An oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5.5. Re-elect Marc A. Hayek - Executive Director

Executive Director, considered to be connected with the controlling shareholder. The level of independence on the Board is not considered to be sufficient to offset the power of an Executive director who also has connections on the Board. Where there is a controlling shareholder, it would be best practice to have an independent Board and independent Lead Director to offset the power of the controlling shareholder. As the Company does not abide by this practice, opposition is recommended.

5.6. Re-elect Claude Nicollier - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and member of the Audit and Remuneration Committees. Not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. 5.8. Elect Steven Wood Proposed Non-Executive Director. Not considered independent as the Director is a representative of the Shareholder group 'Bearer Shareholders'. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. It is worth noting that the proposal of Mr. Steven Wood to be elected to the Board of Directors as representative of the bearer shareholders is not supported by the Board of Directors. Opposition recommended.

TERNA SPA AGM - 21-05-2025

0030. Long-Term Incentive Plan based on 2025-2029 Performance Shares

The Performance Share Plan 2025–2029 is targeted primarily at the management personnel within the Terna Group. This includes the General Manager (who also holds the position of Chief Executive Officer), key management personnel, and a selected group of senior and middle managers who are pivotal in achieving the Group's strategic objectives. The plan foresees participation by up to a maximum of 180 beneficiaries. The plan does not require any investment from the beneficiaries. The shares are granted free of charge upon the achievement of specific performance objectives, conditional on continued employment and other plan conditions.

The plan provides for the allocation of Performance Shares. These are ordinary shares of Terna S.p.A. awarded free of charge. There is no mention of options or phantom shares; the plan is strictly based on the grant of real equity instruments (i.e., actual shares). Additionally, beneficiaries may receive "dividend equivalents," representing the value of dividends that would have been received on the granted shares during the vesting period, awarded in the form of additional shares.

The award of Performance Shares under the Plan is subject to the achievement of performance conditions that are, although not all, quantified, measured over a three-year vesting period (2025–2027). The performance conditions are grouped into three categories:

Operating Performance (45% weighting), including Cumulative EBITDA (15% weighting): Targets and scoring are numeric, ranging from 0% (if EBITDA is less than Plan – €135M) up to 150% (if EBITDA exceeds Plan by +€135M); Funds from Operations (FFO) to Average Net Debt (30% weighting): Targets and scoring are numeric, with thresholds at 10%, 11%, and 11.5%.

Market Performance (15% weighting), including Relative Total Shareholder Return (TSR): Terna's TSR is measured against a benchmark group. Performance scores are clearly defined for specific rankings (e.g., 0% for 5th–7th place, 100% for 3rd place, and 150% for 1st–2nd place, with conditions for negative TSR).

Sustainability Performance (40% weighting): including Overgeneration (30% weighting): Numeric targets are set regarding the reduction in modulated production from non-programmable renewable sources; Connections (10% weighting): Efficiency of connection times to the national grid is measured against predefined contractual standards.

A minimum overall performance threshold of 80% is required for any shares to be awarded, with a maximum potential of 150% of the targeted shares.

The Plan provides for: A three-year vesting period (2025–2027), during which performance objectives must be achieved. Following vesting, shares will be awarded in 2028. 30% of the awarded shares, including any shares awarded as dividend equivalents, will be subject to a two-year lock-up period ending in 2029. During this lock-up period, the shares cannot be transferred or sold. Additionally, beneficiaries must maintain a continuous employment relationship up to the award date to be eligible for the shares. Specific clawback provisions apply if performance information is later found to be incorrect or in cases of fraud or gross misconduct. The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan.

PIRC's analysis

Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice, although not fully since some are linked to budget who is not clearly quantified (despite being mentioned in the business plan 2024-2028, is not broken down by year), making an actual informed assessment impossible at this time. Additionally, the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term. Opposition is recommended.

Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. 1D.. Elect Scott Gottlieb - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

1G.. Elect Anna Richo - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director, chair of the Nominating/Corporate Governance Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Nominating/Corporate Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

2.. Appoint the Auditors

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 1.35% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.96% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3.. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The compensation rating is: ADB. Based on this rating, opposition is recommended.

4.. To approve the Second Amended and Restated 2015 Stock and Incentive Plan of Illumina, Inc.

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

3b. Elect Albert Ip Yuk-keung - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee and Nomination Committee and member of the Sustainability Committee. Not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Audit and Nomination Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 20%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red, indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, the company has failed to set emissions targets covering all relevant emissions scopes. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election the chair of the sustainability committee, however as the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is not up for re-election, responsibility falls to senior members of said committee. Opposition is recommended based on these grounds.

4. Appoint the Auditors and Allow the Board to Determine their Remuneration

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 120.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 72.73% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

Additionally, the company's auditor does not disclose considering climate and it is not clear whether they assessed climate-related risks associated with a 1.5C scenario. As such it is recommended to oppose the re-appointment of the auditor.

The Plan is presented as an omnibus plan, which means that bundled within the same official plan there are various incentive plan elements aimed at rewarding different groups of employees, officers and executives. However, it is noted that the Compensation Committee retains the power to select employees to receive awards and determine the terms and conditions of awards (and also note that 'management employees' appear most likely to be the principal beneficiaries of the Plan). On this basis, opposition is recommended.

6.. Amendments to the Company's Certificate of Incorporation to limit the liability of certain officers of the Company, as permitted by Delaware law.

It is proposed that the Company's Certificate of Incorporation is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

THERMO FISHER SCIENTIFIC INC. AGM - 21-05-2025

1a.. Elect Marc N. Casper - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. It is noted the committee may defer and pay a proportion (up to 40% of the earned annual bonus) in shares which vest after two year of grant and must be held for two years after vesting. Though the deferral component is welcomed, it should be noted that it is considered that 50% of the annual bonus should be deferred for over two years. Malus and clawback provisions apply. LTIP award has a performance period of three years which is not sufficiently, long-term, however a two year holding period applies which is welcomed.

18. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback could potentially increase the ownership stake of a controlling shareholder, whether current or potential. This could lead to an imbalance in shareholder power and undermine the interests of minority shareholders. It is crucial to avoid consolidating control in the hands of one entity, as this could hinder corporate governance and decision-making. To ensure fairness and equitable treatment of all shareholders, it won't be supported any buyback that risks increasing the ownership of a controlling party.

19. Approve Rule 9 Waiver

Resolution 19 seeks approval from independent shareholders to waive the requirement for the Concert Party to make a mandatory offer under Rule 9 of the Takeover Code, should their shareholding increase as a result of the Company repurchasing its own shares. While the waiver would allow flexibility in executing a buy-back programme, the proposal lacks a binding commitment from the Concert Party not to increase their holding, relying instead on a non-binding statement of current intent. This creates the risk of an incremental rise in control without shareholder scrutiny or an offer to remaining investors. It would be preferable for any buy-back activity to include or prioritise purchases from the Concert Party itself, to avoid further consolidation of their influence and ensure a more equitable treatment of all shareholders. In the absence of such safeguards, the resolution raises concerns around governance and should not be supported.

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

Non-Executive Director and Member of the Nomination and Remuneration Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination and Remuneration Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

1j.. Elect Dirk Van de Put - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

The company has been subject to litigation during the year under review and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are concerns about the potential financial and reputational impacts of this litigation on the company. As the new Chair of the Audit Committee will assume the role after the AGM, responsibility for risk oversight rests with the CEO.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. 16. Approve the Remuneration Report (Ex post say on pay)

There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

17. Approve the Remuneration Paid to the Chair and CEO

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. In 2024, Bolloré SE's CEO, Cyrille Bolloré, received a €10 million exceptional bonus tied to the successful completion of the sale of Bolloré Logistics. Although not part of the standard annual incentive plan, this transaction-based award is considered variable remuneration, as it was subject to specific performance conditions. As such there are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed all quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

19. Approve Remuneration Policy of Chair and CEO

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration does not seem to be consistently capped and as such there are excessiveness concerns as the total potential variable remuneration may exceed 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no specific mention of claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

25. Approve grant of free shares (existing or newly issued) to officers and employees of the company or its subsidiaries

Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

26. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. While the percentage limit is within acceptable bounds, the extended time frame raises concerns about long-term shareholder value and potential market impact. This extended period could lead to excessive buybacks beyond the intended scope, which is not in line with standard practices. Given the duration exceeds the typical 18-month limit, opposition is recommended.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Total potential awards under all incentive schemes are considered excessive with a maximum opportunity of 375% of base salary for the CEO (150% Annual Bonus and 225% LTIP). Bonus outcomes are normally paid in cash, although 25% of any bonus outcomes (net of tax) must be deferred into shares for a two-year period. For the LTIP awards will be granted with vesting dependent on the achievement of performance conditions set by the Committee, with performance normally measured over at least a three-year performance period, which is not considered sufficient. The Group may offer participation in a pension plan for the jurisdiction in which they are based or may permit Executive Directors to take a cash supplement in lieu of pension up to the same value. 20. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. While the percentage limit is within acceptable bounds, the extended time frame raises concerns about long-term shareholder value and potential market impact. EOG RESOURCES INC AGM - 21-05-2025

1a.. Elect Janet F. Clark - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Nominating, Governance and Sustainability Committee and member of Audit and Compensation and Human Resources Committees. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that Nominating, Governance and Sustainability, Audit and Compensation and Human Resources Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the Chair of the Nominating, Governance and Sustainability Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Furthermore, based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red, indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, amongst other things, the company has failed to disclose 2030-2035 intermediate emissions targets, does not have a dedicated committee for oversight on sustainability matters and has not had its targets verified as being aligned with the 1.5C or well below 2C pathway. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the Chair of the Nominating, Governance and Sustainability Committee.

1h.. Elect Ezra Y. Yacob - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Furthermore, based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red, indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, amongst other things, the company has failed to disclose 2030-2035 intermediate emissions targets, does not have a dedicated committee for oversight on sustainability matters and has not had its targets verified as being aligned with the 1.5C or well below 2C pathway. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

CAPITAL LIMITED AGM - 21-05-2025

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are serious concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns and it is recommended to abstain this resolution.

Vote Cast: Abstain

Results: For: 98.9, Abstain: 1.1, Oppose/Withhold: 0.0,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

The proposed changes include allowing the Remuneration Committee to vary the proportion of bonuses paid in cash and shares, replacing the current fixed 50:50 split, and introducing a post-employment shareholding requirement whereby Executive Directors must retain the lower of 100% of their actual holding at cessation and 150% of salary for two years after leaving the company. However, total variable pay could reach 250% of salary for the Executive Chair and CEO, which is deemed excessive given it surpasses the 200% threshold. Regarding the annual bonus, the flexibility in payout structure is considered inadequate, with a preferred structure being 50% in cash and 50% deferred into shares for at least three years. In terms of the Long-Term Incentive Plan (LTIP), it is noted that no non-financial metrics are used, which is viewed as misaligned with best practice since such metrics help link pay to overall business performance and individual executive contributions-especially important as financial metrics are often outside a director's control. Although the performance period is set at three years, which is not seen as sufficiently long-term, the subsequent two-year holding period is a positive feature. Additionally, there is no indication that dividends are excluded from vesting awards during the grant-to-vesting period, potentially misaligning executive and shareholder interests, as shareholders must purchase shares to receive dividends, unlike plan participants. Malus and clawback provisions do apply to all forms of variable pay.

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit Committee. Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. There are no major amendments proposed to the remuneration policy, however, the Committee is proposing changes to the performance metrics for the variable pay to reflect the Group's strategic levers, to deliver sustainable improvements in the performance and growth outlook for the business. Maximum variable pay for the CEO is 350% of the salary, which is deemed excessive when compared to the maximum recommended limit of 200%. It would be best practise for at least half of the annual bonus to defer into shares for a period of at least three years. The performance period for the LTIP is three-years, which is deemed overly short-term, however, an additional two year holding period applies post vesting, which is welcomed. Also welcomed is the inclusion of non-financial performance metrics for the LTIP. Malus and clawback apply to all aspects of the variable pay.

It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. 8.. Amend the Third Amended and Restated Certificate of Incorporation to exculpate certain officers as permitted by Delaware law.

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

6.. Shareholder Resolution: Respect Civil Liberties in Advertising Services

Proponent Shareholder: American Family Association

Proponent's argument: The proponent expresses concern that Verizon may be participating in discriminatory advertising practices that negatively affect ad buyers and sellers on the basis of their political or religious views. The proposal highlights Verizon's involvement in the Global Alliance for Responsible Media (GARM), a powerful industry group that aimed to enhance "brand safety" by discouraging advertising on platforms considered to promote "hate speech" or "disinformation." The proponent argues that GARM and similar initiatives have enabled vague, subjective standards that disproportionately censor dissenting or conservative viewpoints. GARM's disbandment after public scrutiny and litigation is cited as evidence of its controversial nature. The proponent links these policies to broader industry practices maintained by major advertising agencies that allegedly limit freedom of expression and religious liberty. This raises potential legal and reputational risks under anti-discrimination and antitrust laws. The proposal requests a board-level evaluation and public report on how Verizon manages and mitigates the risks of discriminatory behavior in advertising services based on political or religious viewpoints. The goal is to increase transparency and ensure that Verizon is not misusing its advertising power or infringing on civil liberties under the guise of brand safety. Company's response: Verizon urges shareholders to vote against the proposal, asserting that its advertising decisions are grounded in legitimate business considerations-not in political or religious bias. The company emphasizes that protecting its brand reputation is critical, and brand safety policies are designed accordingly to avoid association with harmful content, not to suppress particular viewpoints.

Verizon selects advertising platforms based on effectiveness, budget, audience reach, and brand impact-not ideology. The company's Code of Conduct explicitly prohibits discrimination and applies across all business operations. Employees receive training to reinforce these standards. Verizon maintains that its commitment to non-discrimination is already embedded in its culture and operations and that it is transparent about its policies. The Board contends that the report requested by the proponent would not add value, as current practices already align with ethical principles and shareholder interests. As such, the company sees no need for further reporting on this issue.

PIRC analysis: While the proposal claims to support viewpoint neutrality, its true focus appears to be on embedding political and religious ideology-particularly conservative social views-into the company's advertising decisions. The resolution aims to portray the exclusion of harmful or polarizing content as ideological discrimination. This conflates brand safety with censorship. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company includes viewpoints that some customers may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable. The company already maintains content-neutral policies to avoid association with divisive or harmful material. Requiring explicit protections for ideological diversity in advertising risks forcing the platforming of content that undermines inclusivity, factual integrity, or public trust. Embedding such a mandate into ad oversight may inadvertently introduce bias and compromise the effectiveness of the company's current brand safety and non-discrimination commitments. The proposal ultimately risks shifting ad policy from protecting brand integrity to arbitrating ideology-an outcome that could increase reputational and legal exposure rather than mitigate it. Opposition is recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Disclosure: All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary increased by 2.9% for the year under review and is in line with the increase of the workforce salary which increased by 6.4%. The CEO salary is on the lower quartile of the competitor group.

Balance: Total variable pay for the year under review is 404% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 199.2% of the salary, LTIP: 204.8% of the salary) and is considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to the average employee is considered excessive at 69:1. PIRC consider appropriate a ratio of 20:1

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Changes proposed: i) Increase in amount of long-term incentives permissible under the Remuneration Policy, to address gaps in competitiveness against a global comparator group, ii) Evolution of the structure of the long-term incentive awards through a combination of Performance Shares (PSP) linked to stretching Convatec performance targets, and Restricted Stock Units (RSU) linked to continued employment with the business and iii) Increase the level of shareholding requirement under the Remuneration Policy for the CEO to 500% of salary.

Total variable pay could reach 725% of the salary for the CEO and 525% of the salary for the CFO and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus one third of the Bonus is deferred to shares for three years, this is not considered adequate. It would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the LTIP award, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two-year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Convatec Group Omnibus Incentive Plan. The Omnibus Plan is intended to replace the Long-Term Incentive Plan 2016, the Share Plan 2016 and the Deferred Bonus Plan 2016 (collectively, the "2016 Plans") which are due to expire in 2026. All employees of the Group (including Executive Directors) will be eligible to participate in the Omnibus Plan at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee. Awards under the Omnibus Plan may take the form of, or any combination of: (a) an option to acquire the Company's shares at a nil/nominal or market value exercise price (an "Option"); (b) a conditional right to receive Company shares (a "Conditional Award"); (c) an award of restricted Company shares ("Restricted Shares"); (d) a stock appreciation right (a "SAR"); or (e) a right to receive a cash payment calculated by reference to the market value of the Company's shares (a "Phantom Award"), at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee. Awards will be subject to continued employment. The vesting of Awards may also be subject to the satisfaction of any applicable performance conditions or other conditions. The Remuneration Committee will set the vesting date or dates for Awards when they are granted. Vesting of Awards may also be conditional upon: (a) participants having complied with all regulatory and legal requirements applicable to them or in connection with the Award granted; (b) participants having provided any relevant information and made relevant elections or obtained any necessary dealing consents as reasonably requested by the Company; and (c) participants accepting all relevant terms of the Award, including, for example, provisions relating to malus and clawback. The Remuneration Committee has discretion to impose a post-vesting holding period ("Holding Period") of such length as it determines in respect of vested shares or unexercised Awards.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries, therefore, an oppose vote is recommended.

There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red, indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, the company has failed to commit to net zero emissions by 2050. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the chair of the board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. 11. Cancel Existing Authorised Capital

Resolution 11 proposes to cancel the previously unused authorized capital of €512 million and replace it with a new authorization, Authorized Capital 2025 II, allowing Deutsche Bank's Management Board, with Supervisory Board approval, to raise up to €498 million in new share capital through cash issuances until April 30, 2030. While shareholders are generally granted pre-emptive rights, these may be excluded in specific cases, such as for technical rounding, to grant rights to holders of convertible instruments, or for share issues at near market prices, provided that any such exclusions do not cumulatively exceed 10 percent of the share capital. Authority to issue shares without pre-emptive rights is proposed for less than 10% of the current share capital. However; the duration of the authority exceeds 18 months. 12. Approve Issuance of Participatory Certificates and Other Hybrid Debt Securities up to Aggregate Nominal Value of EUR 12 Billion

The use of Tier 1 capital bonds are not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. Such instrument are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentivises equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Additionally, authority is sought up until 2030 which exceeds the recommended 18 months limit. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended. Under the 2025 remuneration policy, the requirement to defer one-third of the annual bonus into shares has been removed for Executive Directors who have met their shareholding guideline; however, the deferral still applies where the guideline has not been met, with shares vesting after two years. The cap on Executive Directors' benefits allowance has also been removed. The total maximum variable remuneration opportunity is 500% of salary (Annual Bonus: 200%, LTIP: 300%), which is considered excessive. Annual Bonus performance measures include financial, strategic, operational, ESG, or personal targets. LTIP performance measures, typically assessed independently over three years, include Relative TSR, Absolute TSR, and average Scope 1 & 2 CO emissions intensity, with 25% vesting at threshold and 100% at maximum. Although the performance period is three years, a two-year post-vesting holding requirement applies, extending the time horizon to five years. Malus and clawback provisions apply to both bonus and LTIP. Executive Directors must build and maintain a shareholding of 200% of salary and retain at least 50% of post-tax vested shares until compliant, with the guideline continuing to apply for two years post-employment unless the Committee decides otherwise. 4.. Amend the Company's Restated Certificate of Incorporation to Limit the Liability of Certain Officers as Permitted by Delaware Law

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to amend the articles in order to allow virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

WATERS CORPORATION AGM - 22-05-2025

1a.. Elect Flemming Ornskov - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee and member of the Compensation Committee.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

Furthermore, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

Lastly, the articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Changes proposed: i) increase our shareholding policies from 300% to 450% of base salary, ii) Recruitment: Introduction of the exception for the Remuneration Committee to grant awards in the recruitment of the Executive without shareholders approval and iii) All legacy arrangement are removing.

Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% deferred to shares for a two-year period which is in line with best practice. It is noted that both the Annual Bonus and the Long-Term Incentive Awards have non-financial performance measures which is welcomed. However, concerns are raised for the remuneration policy since total variable pay could reach 600% of the salary which is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. Performance period for the LTIP award is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two-year holding period applies which is welcomed. Dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. There are concerns that annual bonus targets include health and safety targets, when ensuring the health and safety of colleagues should be a bare minimum and Executives should not be financially incentivised for achieving this. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

25. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

The proposed changes include the removal of the risk management metric from the STI scorecard, with a corresponding increase in the weighting of the customer metric. For the LTI scorecard, the operating margin metric is proposed to be removed, with its 25% weighting redistributed-20% to the earnings per share (EPS) metric and 5% to the relative total shareholder return (TSR) metric. Additionally, the TSR comparator group is proposed to be narrowed from the FTSE 250 excluding investment trusts to also exclude companies in the basic resources (mining), oil, and gas sectors. The total potential variable pay is capped at 400% of salary, which exceeds the deemed acceptable limit of 200% and is considered excessive. Annual Bonus performance is evaluated based on a combination of financial, strategic, and personal targets, with payouts split evenly-50% in cash and 50% deferred in shares. The LTIP award has a performance period of three years, which is not regarded as sufficiently long-term, although a two-year holding requirement for vested shares is viewed positively. Dividend equivalents may be accrued on unvested shares, which misaligns executive and shareholder interests, as only the latter must subscribe for shares to receive dividends. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Disclosure: The highest-paid director for the year under review was the Executive Chair Lucio Genovese. All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The Executive Chair's base salary was increased on 1 July 2024 from USD 475,000 per annum to USD 825,000 per annum, amounting to an increase in salary of 173.68% and it is noted that an additional fee of USD 325,000 was added to his remuneration in the year under review to reflect the time commitments of the role. This would be vastly excessive in normal circumstances, however, given Mr. Genovese's rapidly changing responsibilities in the year under review, there is adequate justification for this increase. The Executive Chair's salary is in the median of PIRC's comparator group.

Balance: No variable pay was made to the Executive Chair in the year under review. The Executive Chair's pay ratio was 75:1, which is deemed excessive when compared to the maximum recommended limit of 20:1. 7. Re-elect Lucio Genovese - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair and Chair of the Nomination Committee. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. In terms of best practice, it is also considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Additionally, this Director received significant opposition of over 10% at the previous year's AGM, and there has been no statement explaining how this situation was addressed with shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

1. Receive the Annual Report

The dividend policy was put forward for shareholder's approval, which is welcomed.

The functions of the Investment Manager and Company Secretary are performed by two different companies, which is welcomed.

The company have disclosed a voting policy indicating how they vote on issues relating to investment and investee companies. In addition, it is also noted ESG matters are taken into account in investment decisions which is welcomed. However, a Key Information Document (KID) is not disclosed for the year under review, and therefore the disclosure of the breakdown of costs is considered inadequate, and while it is understood that the previous cost disclosure rules under the PRIIPs Regulation are no longer required by the FCA for Investment Trusts, the omission of this breakdown at this time is considered contrary to best practise. On this basis, abstention is recommended.

DUPONT DE NEMOURS INC AGM - 22-05-2025

1b.. Elect Edward D. Breen - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

1e.. Elect Alexander M. Cutler - Senior Independent Director

Senior Independent Director, Chair of the Nomination & Governance Committee and member of the People & Compensation Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years in aggregate with his tenure at DuPont. It is considered that a Senior Independent Director should be independent, in order to fulfil the responsibilities assigned to that role, irrespective of the level of independence of the Board. Similarly, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination & Governance Committee and the People & Compensation Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. 19. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

FDJ UNITED AGM - 22-05-2025

6. Approve the Remuneration Report of Corporate Directors

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy for Corporate Directors. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Furthermore, there are no claw back clauses in place, which is against best practices. Opposition is recommended.

10. Approve Remuneration Policy for the Corporate Directors

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy for the Corporate Directors. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

13. Authorise the Board to Waive Pre-emptive Rights during a Public Offer Scenario

14. Approve Issue of Shares for Private Placement

The Board requests authority to approve a global authority for the issue of capital related securities without pre-emptive rights by private placement. This authority is not requested in connection with a particular operation and has not been duly justified by the Company. Opposition is therefore recommended.

21. Approve Free Issue of Shares for Foreign Employees

The Board proposes the approval of a new incentive plan. Under the plan, employees will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

5. Re-elect Simon Burke - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

Additionally, the level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Such instrument are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentivises equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the renewal of the WPP plc Share Option Plan. Under the plan eligible to participate are, all Employees (including executive directors) of the Company and any subsidiaries of the Company. Share awards under the Plan may take the form of an option to acquire ordinary shares (or depository interests representing ordinary shares) in the Company (Shares) at an exercise price set by the Compensation Committee at grant (an Option). It is intended that options will be granted with a market-value exercise price. Under the Plan, any Option granted to an executive director shall not exceed any limit set out in the Company's Directors' Compensation Policy applicable at the time of grant. In any 10-year period, the number of Shares issued or issuable under the Plan and under any other employees' share plan adopted by the Company must not exceed 10 per cent. of the issued share capital of the Company from time to time. Options will normally vest and become exercisable over a period set by the Compensation Committee at grant and only to the extent that any conditions set by the Compensation Committee at grant have been satisfied. Subject to any holding requirements set by the Compensation Committee at grant, the Option will become exercisable on vesting. Options may also be granted subject to a post-vesting holding period (Holding Period). During the Holding Period, the participant cannot normally sell or transfer any Shares received on vesting, except to cover tax and in other limited circumstances such as in connection with certain corporate events.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. COCA-COLA HBC AG AGM - 23-05-2025

5.1.1. Re-elect Anastassis G. David - Chair (Non Executive)

Chair. Not independent upon appointment as he is a representative of Kar-Tess Holding SA, a significant shareholder of the Company (22.9 % of the share capital). It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. 8. Advisory vote on the UK Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

Rating: AD. Based on the rating an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9. Advisory vote on the Remuneration Policy

Changes proposed: i) MIP: Maximum opportunity increased from 140% to 200% of base salary, ii) The Remuneration Committee will remove the requirement for deferral of 50% of any MIP award into shares so long as the in-employment shareholding requirement is met by the CEO and iii) increase of the in-employment shareholding requirement from 300% of the salary to 450% of base salary.

Total potential variable pay could reach 530% of the salary for the CEO and is considered excessive since it is higher than 200%. The MIP (Management Incentive Plan) is paid 50% in cash and 50% is deferred to shares for three years, however, under the new policy if the in-employment shareholding requirement is met, then the MIP will be paid in cash. This is not considered adequate it is preferable for annual incentives as the MIP to be paid 50% in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three year. The Performance Share Plan (PSP) has financial and non-financial KPI's as performance measures which is welcomed. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies, which is welcomed. Concerns are raised since Dividend accrual is not prohibited. Such rewards mislead shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Malus and claw back provisions apply to all variable pay.

Rating: BDD. Based on the rating an oppose vote is recommended.

The Board of Directors propose a maximum aggregate amount of compensation for members of the operating committee/executive directors in the amount of EUR 56.28 million. Total target payments for the MIP amount to 100% of total salaries and total target payments for the PSP amount to 330% of salary. This is considered excessive. In addition, the payout under these schemes at maximum level are considered excessive. Due to recommended opposition to the Company's Remuneration policy, an oppose vote is recommended.

It is proposed to amend the articles in order to allow virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. AMGEN INC. AGM - 23-05-20251b.. *Re-elect Robert A. Bradway - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. 4. Re-elect Mr. Mark Allen - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee

At this time, the report of the progresses made on the recommendations of the Parker report, which seeks to improve the ethnic and cultural diversity of UK boards, is not considered to be sufficient. As chair of the nomination committee. The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time. It is also noted that in the 2024 Annual General Meeting the re-election of Mr. Allen received significant opposition of 13.44% of the votes and the Company did not disclosed information as to how addressed the issue with its shareholders. 19. Say on Climate

Governance

There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change and decarbonisation on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.

There is evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board and senior management of climate-related issues.

The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.

Disclosure

The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.

The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.

The company has committed to being carbon neutral by 2050 and includes scopes 1, 2 and 3 emission reductions in this commitment. The company strategy appears to include an actual reduction of carbon emissions rather than having a heavy reliance on offsetting.

PIRC Analysis

Despite some best practice at the level of governance, there does not appear to be any individual accountability for the policy, and the policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability.

26. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

27. Approve Issue of Shares for Employee Saving Plan

1d.. Elect Robert M. Davis - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. 6.. Shareholder Resolution: Revisit DEI Goals in Executive Pay Incentives

Proponent Shareholder: The National Legal and Policy Center

Proponent's argument: The proponent urges Merck's board to revisit and consider eliminating Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) milestones from executive compensation programs. Citing the 2023 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Students for Fair Admissions v. Harvard, the proposal argues that corporate DEI initiatives are facing increasing legal scrutiny and litigation risk. It highlights that many universities and corporations have scaled back or ended DEI programs due to concerns about potential violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act. The proponent asserts that Merck's DEI-based incentive structures such as allocating 10% of the executive scorecard to "sustainability" goals that include employee engagement and inclusion create discriminatory outcomes and expose the company to reputational and legal risk. Merck's DEI initiatives include tailored leadership development programs for specific demographic groups, including Black, Latino, LGBTQ+, and female employees. The proponent claims these programs could be viewed as exclusionary or as operating racial or identity based preferences. It argues that incentive structures tied to such programs could appear to enforce informal hiring quotas or set asides, a practice increasingly vulnerable to legal challenge. In light of this, the proposal requests that Merck's Compensation and Management Development Committee evaluate the current executive incentive guidelines and assess whether DEI linked targets should be removed to mitigate potential risk.

Company's response: Merck's Board recommends voting against the proposal, asserting that it is unnecessary because the Compensation and Management Development (C&MD) Committee already performs the oversight functions the proposal seeks. The Committee annually reviews the design, metrics, and weighting of performance measures in the executive compensation framework to ensure alignment with shareholder interests and corporate strategic objectives. The Company Scorecard, used to determine annual cash incentives, includes a 10% weighting for sustainability related goals that encompass enabling global access to healthcare and fostering employee engagement and inclusion elements that reflect long-term value creation. These metrics are regularly evaluated and are based on operational outcomes and employee feedback, including survey data. The Board emphasises that the Scorecard metrics are not arbitrary, but rather directly tied to the Company's strategic priorities, including R&D pipeline development and global health impact. Moreover, the CD&A section of Merck's proxy filing outlines the exact components and evaluation of these metrics, ensuring full transparency for shareholders. The Board rejects the assertion that these programs are discriminatory, instead affirming that they promote inclusion and strategic growth. In the Board's view, the current compensation structure is appropriate, well governed, and aligned with best practices, rendering the proposal redundant and misaligned with Merck's values and objectives.

PIRC analysis: This proposal seeks to remove DEI related milestones from executive pay incentives based on the premise that such initiatives expose the company to legal, reputational, and governance risks. However, the underlying assumption-that DEI programs are inherently discriminatory or pose value destroying risks is not supported by the prevailing body of research and business practice. A wide range of evidence links diversity and inclusion to enhanced corporate performance, innovation, talent attraction and retention, and better stakeholder engagement. Rather than constituting a governance failure, integrating DEI into performance incentives reflects good governance practice by aligning executive accountability with long-term value creation and social responsibility goals. The proposal's framing appears ideologically driven, positioning DEI as a liability, which risks undermining board discretion and management autonomy in setting human capital strategy. There is no evidence that Merck's DEI-linked compensation mechanisms violate applicable laws or governance principles. On the contrary, the company's approach-including regular board oversight and transparency through its Scorecard demonstrates alignment with its strategic goals and responsiveness to stakeholder expectations. Supporting this proposal could send the wrong signal about shareholder priorities, potentially discouraging beneficial DEI practices and weakening commitments to workplace equity and inclusion. For these reasons, opposition to the resolution is recommended.

7.. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Civil Liberties in Advertising Services

Proponent Shareholder: The Bahnsen Family Trust dated July 14, 2003

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests that Merck's Board produce a report evaluating how it oversees potential risks related to discrimination in advertising practices based on political or religious viewpoints. The proponent argues that Merck's participation in advertising consortia such as the Global Alliance for Responsible Media (GARM) may have contributed to the exclusion or demonetization of certain media platforms and voices, potentially exposing the company to legal and reputational risks. GARM, supported by major global advertisers, was accused of enforcing vague content standards and promoting the deplatforming of views labeled as "disinformation" or "insensitive," which the proponent sees as a threat to free expression and ideological diversity. The proposal points to high-profile controversies, such as platform boycotts and de-ranking of news outlets, to argue that such practices have contributed to public backlash and litigation-particularly following GARM's dissolution after legal action from X (formerly Twitter). The proponent contends that Merck, by aligning its advertising strategies with these entities, may have exposed itself to antitrust and anti-discrimination risks. A report is therefore requested to ensure that Merck is not complicit in censorship or bias and is safeguarding civil liberties in its advertising decisions, particularly regarding the treatment of buyers and sellers based on protected viewpoints.

Company's response: The Board recommends voting against the proposal, stating that it would be costly, time-consuming, and redundant given Merck's existing governance structures and disclosures. The company affirms its commitment to responsible marketing practices rooted in ethics and compliance with relevant laws, including those governing healthcare advertising, antitrust, and competition. Merck highlights its Code of Conduct, regular compliance training, and oversight by the Audit Committee as mechanisms that ensure its advertising decisions adhere to regulatory and ethical standards. The Board also cites Merck's robust Enterprise Risk Management (ERM) process, which identifies and manages emerging business risks and aligns risk oversight with corporate values and ethics. In the Board's view, these systems sufficiently cover the scope of the concerns raised by the proposal. It emphasizes that the Audit Committee monitors compliance across the organization and regularly reports to the Board, including updates from the chief ethics and compliance officer. Furthermore, Merck's 2023/2024 Impact Report outlines its standards for marketing conduct. The Board concludes that the requested report would not yield meaningful additional insights or shareholder value and instead could divert resources from core business priorities. Therefore, the proposal is deemed unnecessary and not in the best interests of the company or its shareholders.

PIRC analysis: While transparency around advertising policies and political neutrality is important, this resolution appears to be ideologically motivated and misrepresents existing governance and oversight structures. The proposal reflects a broader campaign from politically aligned groups aiming to pressure companies to roll back established policies on brand safety, misinformation, and platform standards under the guise of protecting civil liberties. The resolution does not focus on enhancing governance or improving disclosure but instead seeks to reframe corporate advertising decisions as evidence of systemic bias against certain viewpoints. There is no substantive evidence that Merck has engaged in discriminatory advertising practices or violated civil rights or antitrust law. Moreover, Merck already provides extensive information about its ethical marketing policies, board oversight of risk and compliance, and commitment to lawful and responsible corporate conduct. Requiring a new report based on speculative claims would divert resources and encourage unnecessary politicization of operational decisions. Instead of improving shareholder value or transparency, the resolution could set a precedent for ideological interference in routine business practices. A vote against the proposal is recommended.

The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing virtual-only meetings.

6. Amend Articles: Limit the liability of Certain Officers

It is proposed that the Certificate of Incorporation, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuade shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

ROYAL CARIBBEAN GROUP AGM - 28-05-2025

1a.. Elect John F. Brock - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee and member of the Talent and Compensation Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that Nominating and Corporate Governance and Talent and Compensation Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Corporate Governance's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

While the company has set out climate targets, assigned board-level accountability and provided a description on the mitigation levers it will use, it has failed to adequately detail board members' expertise in climate change. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the chair of the sustainability committee. However, as neither the chair or members of the CSR committee are up for election, opposition is recommended for the longest serving board member up for election, which is Charles Edelstenne.

18. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Securities Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. GE HEALTHCARE TECHNOLOGIES INC AGM - 28-05-2025

1b.. Re-elect H. Lawrence Culp, Jr. - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

2.. Appoint the Auditors

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.01% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.01% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

3.. Approve 2025 Equity Incentive Plan

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. 7.5. Elect Michael Zimmer - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Nomination Committee and member of the Remuneration Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration report. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. 9.. Approve Grant of Unvested Stock Awards to Jean-Marc Chery as President and CEO

The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted 100,000 unvested shares. Performance criteria are based on Revenue Growth, Operating Margin Ratio and Composite Corporate Social Responsibility Index. The performance conditions will be assessed over a 3-year period, and granted Unvested Stock Awards will conditionally vest after 3 years, subject to the assessment of the performance conditions. Performance targets have not been quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

27. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Securities Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Non-Executive Chair of the Board. The Chair is not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In addition, Mr. Kriens is the former CEO of Company from 1996-2008. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. 1m.. Elect Thomas J. Wilson - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

DELTA ELECTRONICS INC AGM - 29-05-20253. *Amend Article 30 and 33

The board seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Association as follows:

Article 30: Employee and Director Compensation. This article is amended to reinforce the company's profit-sharing mechanism. It clarifies that if the company reports earnings in a given year, at least 3% of profits shall be allocated to employee compensation and no more than 1% to director compensation. In the event of accumulated losses, they must be offset before any distributions are made. The amendment introduces a new clause specifying that no less than 4% of the total employee compensation must be distributed to non-executive employees. It also explicitly defines non-executive employees by government regulations and tax incentive guidelines. The board states that the changes are intended to enhance fairness in profit distribution and align with updated labour and tax policy initiatives promoted by Taiwan's Financial Supervisory Commission.

Article 33: Record of Amendments. This article is updated solely to reflect the latest revision date of the Articles of Association.

The amendment to Article 30 requires that at least 4% of employee compensation be allocated to non-executive staff, in line with regulatory guidance. However, the allocation mechanism remains fully at the board's discretion, lacks transparency, and allows inclusion of subsidiary employees, potentially diluting the benefit to core staff. No performance metrics are disclosed. In addition, non-executive directors receive a variable component on top of their fixed fees, which may compromise their independence by aligning them with short-term interests rather than long-term oversight. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

This proposal seeks approval for the creation of three new four-year cycles (Seventh: 2026 to 2029, Eighth: 2027 to 2030, and Ninth: 2028 to 2031) under its Long-Term Incentive Program. The Incentives will be paid partly in cash and partly in performance shares (or entirely in shares for the CEO), based on the level of achievement of specific performance objectives. The total maximum amount allocated across the three cycles is EUR 148 million. The main new proposal here is to extend the program's timeline by adding these three overlapping cycle. The program sets a cap for the CEO's incentive at no more than 120% of his fixed annual salary at the start of each cycle, ensuring it remains below a 200% limit. However, no specific cap is stated for other executives participating in the program, although their incentives are split between cash and shares depending on their role.

Although the framework outlines the use of performance measures, it defers the setting of measurable thresholds to a later stage; the exact performance targets and quantifiable thresholds have not yet been disclosed and will be determined annually by the Board of Directors. Accordingly, abstention is recommended.

5.. Amend Articles: Approve an amendment to our Restated Certificate of Incorporation to allow for exculpation of officers as permitted by Delaware law.

It is proposed to approve an amendment to the Restated Certificate of Incorporation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

3. Amend Articles

The board seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Association as follows:

Article 24: Employee and Director Compensation. This article is amended to mandate that if there is any profit for a given fiscal year, the Company shall allocate no less than 1% of such profit to employee compensation. Of this amount, at least 50% must be distributed to non-executive employees. A maximum of 0.5% of the profit may be allocated to Directors as remuneration. Compensation to employees may be delivered in cash or shares, and may include employees of affiliate companies, as determined by the Board. The remuneration to Directors shall be paid in cash. These changes are introduced in response to the revised Article 14(6) of the Securities and Exchange Act.

Article 27: Record of Amendments.

The amendment to Article 24 requires that at least 1% of annual profit be allocated to employee compensation, with at least 50% of that directed to non-executive staff.

While aligned with regulatory guidance, the allocation process remains fully at the board's discretion, lacks transparency, and includes affiliate employees-potentially diluting benefits to core staff. No performance criteria are disclosed. These shortcomings raise governance concerns; opposition is recommended.

1. Approve Financial Statements

Disclosure is considered adequate and was made available sufficiently before the meeting. The financial statements have been audited and certified. Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Amber, indicating that it falls short of PIRC's expectations. While the company has set out climate targets, assigned board-level accountability and provided a description on the mitigation levers it will use, it has failed to adequately detail board members' expertise in climate change. As directors are re-elected on a slate basis, and individual responsibility cannot be attributed to the Chair of the Sustainability Committee, opposition to the financial statements is recommended.

3. Amend Articles: 28 and 31

The board seeks to approve amendments to the articles of association 28 and 31, introducing a requirement that 10% of employee compensation be allocated to entry-level employees, and updating the amendment history. Although the proposal aims to strengthen junior staff welfare, it could limit Board flexibility in profit allocation, misalign with shareholder value protection principles, and embed operational decisions into the constitutional documents, creating governance rigidity. Therefore, it may not be in the best interests of shareholders.

It seeks to strengthen internal controls and governance while maintaining liquidity flexibility. Additionally, it ensures compliance with updated regulations from Taiwan's Financial Supervisory Commission.

However, while improving operational efficiency, it may reduce direct Board oversight, warranting careful monitoring of implementation. Opposition is recommended.

1.01. Elect David M. Rubenstein - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

1.05. Elect Linda H. Filler - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director, member of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. As the chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is not up for election, members of the committee are held accountable for this lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, and given the Chair of the Committee is not up for election, a committee member bears accountability for this shortfall. Opposition is recommended.

FAR EASTERN NEW CENTURY CORP AGM - 29-05-2025

3. Amend Articles: 16, 17 and 26

The Board of Directors seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Incorporation to align with updated regulatory requirements, as follows:

Articles 16 and 17 – Board Structure and Tenure. By the "Operation Directions for Compliance with the Establishment of Board of Directors by TWSE Listed Companies and the Board's Exercise of Powers" issued by the Taiwan Stock Exchange (TWSE), the Company proposes to revise Articles 16 and 17 of its Articles of Incorporation. The board states that this aim to clearly define the number of Independent Directors to be appointed to the Board; introduce restrictions on the number of consecutive terms Independent Directors may serve, to enhance the independence of the Board, improve oversight functions, and support a well-balanced governance structure that complies with best practices in corporate governance.

Article 26: Inclusion of New Provisions for Non-Executive Employee Compensation. In compliance with Article 14, Paragraph 6 of the Securities and Exchange Act, and following the Financial Supervisory Commission's Order No. 1130385442 (dated November 8, 2024), as well as the Ministry of Economic Affairs' regulations on tax preferences for wage increases in small and medium enterprises, the Company proposes to introduce a specific provision regarding the allocation of employee compensation. Key elements of the amendment include: Defining non-executive employees as those whose average monthly salary is TWD 63,000 or less; stipulating that no less than 25% of the total annual employee compensation be reserved for non-executive employees.

The amendment to Article 26 requires allocating 2–3.5% of annual profit to employee compensation, with at least 25% reserved for non-executive staff earning TWD 63,000 or less. While the policy aligns with regulatory goals on wage equity, the distribution lacks transparency and remains entirely at the Board's discretion. No performance metrics or disclosure on eligible recipients are provided, and inclusion of affiliate employees may dilute the benefit to FENC's core workforce. Opposition is recommended due to governance and accountability concerns.

O.5. Re-Elect Keith Rayner - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, member of the Audit Committee, member of the Remuneration Committee and member of the Nominating and Governance Committee. Not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that each of these committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members. Furthermore, it is considered that the members of the Remuneration Committee are responsible for the company's remuneration report, and there are concerns with the company's remuneration report.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 20%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. As the Chair is not standing for election, opposition is recommended to the members of the committee.

Vote Cast: Oppose

O.11. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. The Company has disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for the entirety of its variable remuneration component. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on excessiveness concerns.

Vote Cast: Oppose

O.12. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive directors with an advisory vote. There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary for the highest paid director. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

Vote Cast: Oppose

S.2. Approve Fees Payable to the Board of Directors Outside Africa

It is proposed to increase the amount payable to the Board of Directors by more than 10% per director on annual basis. The increase is considered material and exceeds guidelines, while the company has not duly justified it. Therefore, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

S.3. Approve Financial Assistance

It is proposed to obtain approval from shareholders to enable the company to provide financial assistance to a related or interrelated company or corporation, subject to section 44 and/or 45 of the Companies Act.

The purpose of the resolution is to confirm financial assistance to related directors (unless specifically not provided for in the company's memorandum of incorporation) and/or inter-related companies granted during the year under review and to authorise the Board to give effect to any financial assistance deemed appropriate to implement during a two-year period, starting from the date of the adoption of this resolution. While the opportunity for shareholders to approve intra group loans is welcomed, there are reservations about the potential use of this authority for loans to associates, as allowed for by these sections of the Act.

The proposal holds the likelihood of raising potential conflicts of interest between the company and its associates or employees. Also, there are concerns over the risk carried by the company's shareholders in the event of a default of a loan or guaranteed credit made to a related company in which it holds less than 50% of the capital. Based on the above, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

S.4. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital and cannot exceed 15 months. This ensures the buyback remains within a reasonable scope. However, the Share Buyback proposal is conducted at a price greater than a 5% premium to the prevailing market price. We consider this to be an excessive premium that may not represent a prudent use of shareholder capital. Paying significantly above market value for shares can result in an inefficient allocation of resources and may not deliver value to long-term shareholders. In our view, capital would be better deployed elsewhere in the business or returned through more equitable means. Opposition is recommended.

The amendment to Article 22 mandates that at least 20% of employee remuneration be allocated to non-managerial staff, aligning with legal requirements. NATIONAL BANK OF GREECE AGM - 30-05-2025

3. Approval of the overall management by the Board of Directors and discharge of the Auditors of the Bank, with respect to the financial year 2024

As a consequence, releasing auditors from liability will weaken the governance framework and introduce great risks for investors. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

6. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. While the percentage limit is within acceptable bounds, the extended time frame raises concerns about long-term shareholder value and potential market impact. This extended period could lead to excessive buybacks beyond the intended scope, which is not in line with standard practices. Given the duration exceeds the typical 18-month limit, opposition is recommended.

2.1. Elect Nombulelo Moholi - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Nominations Committee and member of the Human Resources and Remuneration Committee.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

S3. Approve Financial Assistance in Terms of Section 44 of the Companies Act

It is proposed to obtain approval from shareholders to enable the company to provide financial assistance to a related or interrelated company or corporation, subject to section 44 and/or 45 of the Companies Act.

The purpose of the resolution is to confirm financial assistance to related directors (unless specifically not provided for in the company's memorandum of incorporation) and/or inter-related companies granted during the year under review and to authorise the Board to give effect to any financial assistance deemed appropriate to implement during a two-year period, starting from the date of the adoption of this resolution. While the opportunity for shareholders to approve intra group loans is welcomed, there are reservations about the potential use of this authority for loans to associates, as allowed for by these sections of the Act.

The proposal holds the likelihood of raising potential conflicts of interest between the company and its associates or employees. Also, there are concerns over the risk carried by the company's shareholders in the event of a default of a loan or guaranteed credit made to a related company in which it holds less than 50% of the capital. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. IBERDROLA SA AGM - 30-05-2025

6.7. Amendment Of The Regulations For The General Shareholders Meeting: Forms Of Holding The Meeting And Special Rules Thereof: Inclusion Of A Title XI With Articles 49 To 61

This resolution adds Title XI, setting out rules for different formats of meetings, such as in-person, remote, or hybrid formats. It defines special provisions for virtual attendance, remote voting, and participation to ensure accessibility and equality regardless of how a meeting is held. It differs from prior items by focusing solely on the form of meeting rather than content or participation rules.

The new rules would explicitly allow the Board of Directors to decide to convene a meeting that is held entirely remotely, without a physical gathering, as long as it complies with the legal requirements for guaranteeing shareholder participation, voting rights, and transparency. It is proposed to amend the articles in order to allow virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. FORTIVE CORPORATION AGM - 03-06-2025

1c.. Elect Sharmistha Dubey - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

4.. Amend Articles

It is proposed to amendment and restatement of Amended and Restated Certificate of Incorporation to provide for the exculpation of officers as permitted by Delaware law and make additional non-substantive and clarifying changes. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

2. Amend Article 33

The board seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Incorporation regarding a mandate that if there is any profit for a given fiscal year, the Company shall allocate no less than 1% of such profit as employee profit-sharing bonuses. Of this amount, at least 30% must be distributed to entry-level employees. Bonuses may be distributed in cash or shares and may include employees of affiliated companies, as determined by the Board. The board states that these changes are introduced in response to the revised Securities and Exchange Act in Taiwan, to ensure compliance with updated statutory requirements and to promote a more equitable distribution of profit-sharing among employees.

The amendment to Article 33 requires that at least 1% of annual profit be allocated to employee profit-sharing bonuses, with a minimum of 30% of that amount directed to entry-level employees. While this aligns with recent legal reforms and promotes greater income equity, the allocation mechanism remains entirely at the board's discretion, lacks transparency, and allows inclusion of affiliate employees-potentially reducing the proportion of benefits received by TSMC's core workforce. Additionally, no performance-based criteria or distribution metrics are disclosed. These shortcomings raise governance and accountability concerns; opposition is recommended.

Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 24.58% of audit fees during the year under review and 24.58% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

7. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

11.B. Elect Lisbet Næørø - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

Vote Cast: Oppose

14. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback proposal is conducted at a price that may be greater than a 5% premium to the prevailing market price. While the company has not disclosed the specific premium at which the buyback may be executed, the absence of this information raises concerns regarding transparency and the potential for excessive valuation. We consider this to be an excessive premium that may not represent a prudent use of shareholder capital. Paying significantly above market value for shares can result in an inefficient allocation of resources and may not deliver value to long-term shareholders. In our view, capital would be better deployed elsewhere in the business or returned through more equitable means. Opposition is recommended.

1e.. Elect Brian H. Sharples - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Chair of the Board. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

4.. Amend Articles: Liability of Officers

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Remuneration Policy of the Company. The total potential variable remuneration could reach up to 500% of base salary, which is considered excessive as it significantly exceeds the generally accepted upper limit of 200%. Regarding the Annual Bonus, at least one-third of any bonus awarded is currently deferred into shares under the Deferred Bonus Plan (DBP), with half of the deferred shares subject to a holding period of at least one year and the remaining half subject to a holding period of at least two years. This deferral structure is considered insufficient. It is recommended that the bonus be split equally, with 50% payable in cash and the remaining 50% deferred into shares, subject to a minimum holding period of three years, to better align executives' interests with long-term shareholder value. In relation to Long-Term Incentive Plan (LTIP) awards, it is noted that there are no non-financial performance measures included. As such, the remuneration framework focuses exclusively on financial key performance indicators (KPIs), many of which may be influenced by factors outside the control of individual directors. This approach fails to adequately reflect the broader operational performance of the business or the individual contributions of executives. While the performance period is three years-an approach that is not considered sufficiently long-term-a subsequent two-year holding period is applied, which is a positive feature. It is also noted that appropriate malus and clawback provisions are in place.

Rating: ADC. Based on the rating opposition is recommended.

21. Approve the amendments of the Long Term Incentive Plan

Shareholders are being asked to approve amendments to the Company's Long-Term Incentive Plan (LTIP). Under the existing LTIP rules, the total number of ordinary shares in the Company ("Shares") that may be issued or transferred from treasury to satisfy awards granted under the LTIP, or any other employee share plan adopted by the Company, is capped at 10% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital over any ten-year rolling period. The proposed amendments reflect updates to the Investment Association's Principles of Remuneration issued in late 2024. Specifically, the revised rules will remove the additional restriction that limited the issuance or transfer of Shares under the LTIP and any executive share plan to 5% of the issued ordinary share capital over the same ten-year period. However, these changes do not improve alignment with shareholder interests. Furthermore, PIRC maintains the view that LTIPs are not an effective mechanism for incentivising performance. Such schemes are often criticised for lacking genuine long-term focus and being susceptible to manipulation due to their discretionary features. For these reasons, PIRC recommends voting against the proposed amendments.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Corporate Governance Committee and member of the Compensation Committee. Not considered to be independent due to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that these Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the Chair of the Corporate Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Corporate Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. Finally, as the Chair of the Corporate Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. 5.. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Charitable Giving

Proponent Shareholder: National Center for Public Policy Research

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research, on behalf of the Free Enterprise Project, calls on PayPal to publish a report analysing how its charitable donations may contribute to discrimination based on speech or religious beliefs. The proponent argues that companies, including PayPal, support nonprofit organisations-such as the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) and Human Rights Campaign (HRC)-that actively influence public policy in ways that may suppress free speech and religious freedom. It claims PayPal has aligned with such groups by relying on them to enforce acceptable use policies that allegedly discriminate against mainstream conservative and religious viewpoints. The proposal highlights that PayPal's listing as a "Silver Partner" to HRC and its inclusion among the "Equality 100 Award" recipients suggests complicity in a broader ideological agenda. The proponent cites other companies that have reconsidered similar affiliations, urging PayPal to follow suit. It concludes by asserting that shareholders deserve clarity and accountability regarding how PayPal's charitable efforts may expose the company to reputational, operational, or ideological risks and conflicts, especially where alleged bias or censorship is perceived.

Company's response: PayPal's Board urges shareholders to vote against the proposal, arguing that it is redundant and misaligned with the company's values and operational governance. The company asserts that its charitable giving is conducted without regard to political or religious viewpoints and is overseen by a robust governance framework. Donations facilitated through platforms such as the PayPal Giving Fund (PPGF), corporate products like Venmo, and matched employee contributions are directed to qualified organisations that adhere to anti-discrimination standards. The company states that all donations are vetted by cross-functional teams to ensure alignment with compliance standards and corporate ethics policies. PayPal emphasises that charitable activity strengthens customer engagement, brand value, and employee community involvement. The Board further argues that the requested report would divert resources and undermine the existing framework of transparency and annual disclosure, such as in the Global Impact Report. It contends that the proposal misrepresents the nature and intent of PayPal's charitable engagements, and that the company already discloses sufficient detail on charitable giving practices. As such, PayPal concludes the requested analysis is unwarranted and not in the best interests of shareholders.

PIRC analysis: Disclosure of approved charities enables shareholders to assess diversity in alignment with long-term company interests. However, this resolution centers on ideological diversity, seeking explicit inclusion of certain political or religious views. The proponent's concerns are based on contested assumptions about specific organisations and imply that all viewpoints must be equally represented in charitable giving. This misunderstands the role of corporate philanthropy, which is governed by clear, non-discriminatory criteria. Given the broad range of existing donation options and established oversight mechanisms, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Oppose vote is therefore recommended.

It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

2. Approve Financial Statements and Allocation of Income

The board proposes approval of the annual financial statements and the distribution of profits. The Board proposes a dividend of EUR 1.60 per share and EUR 0.20 per profit share. The dividend is covered by earnings. The approval of the dividend would be supported if the board proposed the approval of the annual accounts and the dividend under separate proposals.

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to abstain from voting on this resolution.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. 7.. Shareholder Resolution: Actual and Perceived Discrimination on the Basis of Protected Categories Under Civil Rights Law

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests that Netflix conduct an evaluation and publish a report assessing the legal and financial risks of its affirmative action initiatives, specifically concerning actual or perceived discrimination based on protected characteristics under civil rights law. The resolution cites recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings and other legal cases that have challenged or overturned race-based policies, suggesting that similar programs in corporate environments, such as those practiced by Netflix, could expose the company to significant litigation and reputational risks. Examples provided include Netflix's investments in Black-owned banks, businesses, and creators, as well as supplier diversity and creative equity funds. The proponent argues that these initiatives may now constitute unlawful discrimination in light of evolving judicial interpretation. The proposal contends that Netflix's sizeable workforce and broad stakeholder base increases its vulnerability to lawsuits, which-even if only partially successful-could lead to financial liabilities in the billions. Therefore, the proposal advocates for a formal risk assessment report to protect shareholder interests.

Company's Response: Netflix opposes the proposal, asserting that it is unnecessary. The company emphasises that it is an equal opportunity employer committed to compliance with non-discrimination laws across all jurisdictions where it operates. Netflix maintains a robust compliance framework and regularly evaluates its policies, practices, and programs in alignment with legal requirements and business priorities. It believes its existing practices already address the risk and compliance areas raised in the proposal, rendering an additional report redundant. The company further states that risk analysis and mitigation strategies are core business functions already embedded in its operations. For these reasons, the Board considers the proposal unwarranted and recommends voting against it.

PIRC analysis: This resolution, while framed as a risk assessment request, appears primarily motivated by concerns over the legality and impact of the company's diversity and inclusion initiatives. Netflix already discloses relevant information about its DEI programs and maintains a compliance framework that reflects legal obligations across jurisdictions. The company's current reporting and risk management processes appear sufficient to address the issues raised. As such, the additional report requested may not provide meaningful new insights for shareholders and could divert focus from ongoing efforts. A vote against the resolution is recommended.

8.. Shareholder Resolution: Charitable Contributions

Proponent Shareholder: Oklahoma Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust (TSET)

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests that Netflix publish an annual report evaluating how its charitable giving may expose the company to risks related to alleged discrimination against individuals based on their religious beliefs or political speech. The proposal contends that Netflix has supported, directly or indirectly through its employee giving match program, nonprofit organizations accused of suppressing certain viewpoints. These include the Southern Poverty Law Center and Human Rights Campaign, which the proponent claims promote policies or classifications that limit freedom of religion and expression. The supporting statement links these associations to broader reputational risks and cites high-profile public controversies and legal actions involving other companies. It suggests that, by continuing support for such groups, Netflix risks alienating consumers and stakeholders with differing viewpoints. The proposal argues that transparency on this issue is necessary to ensure that Netflix's philanthropic activities align with its publicly stated values on diversity and inclusion and to safeguard the company from potential brand and legal liabilities related to perceived viewpoint discrimination.

Company's Response: Netflix opposes the proposal, stating that its philanthropic activities are employee-driven through its matching program and not a product of corporate endorsement or policy influence. The company explains that employee donations are matched through a third-party platform, Benevity, which includes over two million nonprofit organizations globally. Netflix does not restrict causes supported by employees, aside from general exclusions for legality and standing. It emphasizes that direct corporate donations are rare and generally reserved for crisis-related events such as wildfires or the COVID-19 pandemic, and not connected to influencing public policy or advocacy. As such, the Board believes the proposed report would offer little additional value and could misrepresent the nature of the company's limited involvement in philanthropic decisions. Therefore, the Board concludes that the report is unnecessary and recommends a vote against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides donations to a variety of charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be equally acceptable. Given the diversity that already exists among the organisations available for donations, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. ALPHABET INC AGM - 06-06-2025

1d.. Re-elect John L. Hennessy - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent due to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Also, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. Moreover, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the Chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. As there is no Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and there is concerns with the Company's sustainability policies and practice.

During the year under review, the company has been fined for its community or human rights practices by the company, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, these practices are considered to be examples of a corporate culture not aligned with the interests of all stakeholders.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. 5.. Shareholder Resolution: Charitable Partnerships

Proponent Shareholder: Bowyer Research, Inc., on behalf of Oklahoma Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust

Proponent's argument: The proposal urges Alphabet to issue an annual report assessing how its charitable partnerships may pose reputational or operational risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their speech or religious beliefs. The proponent argues that corporate alignment with certain advocacy groups such as the Human Rights Campaign (HRC) can undermine fundamental freedoms of speech and religion. The proposal references Alphabet's platinum level support for HRC, whose advocacy includes corporate policies on gender identity and healthcare that are politically and culturally divisive. It expresses concern that partnerships of this nature may conflict with Alphabet's stated values around inclusion and diversity of perspective, particularly for individuals holding conservative religious or political views. The proponent believes the company's current affiliations risk alienating stakeholders, damaging brand reputation, and creating an environment that is not politically or religiously neutral. It highlights other companies that have reconsidered or withdrawn similar partnerships and suggests Alphabet do the same by transparently analyzing and reporting the impact of such charitable affiliations on stakeholder trust and business risk. The resolution calls for a measured, non-confidential report that ensures Alphabet's giving aligns with its public commitments to diversity and expression.

Company's Response: Alphabet opposes the proposal, stating that it would interfere with the company's ability to manage its charitable initiatives and operational strategy. The Board asserts that decisions about philanthropic partnerships fall under routine business matters, best handled by management with the relevant expertise. Alphabet emphasizes the long-standing mission of Google.org to fund global initiatives that promote opportunity, guided by strict internal governance and oversight mechanisms. The company maintains that its philanthropic programs operate independently of political or religious agendas and undergo thorough due diligence, including legal and ethical compliance reviews. Google.org explicitly avoids funding lobbying or political activity, and Alphabet clarifies that support for an organization does not equate to endorsement of every stance it may take. Alphabet also reaffirms its commitment to freedom of expression, as stated in its Code of Conduct and product mission. The Board believes current policies adequately safeguard against discriminatory outcomes and ensure that all employees, regardless of personal views, are respected and protected from bias. In light of these systems and values, the Board concludes that the proposed report is unnecessary and would not offer meaningful additional value to shareholders.

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides donations to a variety of charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be equally acceptable. Given the diversity that already exists among the organisations available for donations, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

6.. Shareholder Resolution: Request to Cease CEI Participation

Proponent Shareholder: The National Center for Public Policy Research

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests that Alphabet's Board consider ending participation in the Human Rights Campaign's Corporate Equality Index (CEI), a benchmarking tool that the proponent characterises as ideologically driven and harmful to shareholder value. The proponent asserts that the CEI enforces controversial social and political standards under threat of negative scoring, compelling companies to adopt divisive policies unrelated to their business mission. The proposal highlights that Alphabet's perfect CEI score reflects compliance with criteria that it claims promote gender ideology and controversial healthcare practices, risking reputational harm and financial backlash. Citing examples like Bud Light, Target, Disney, and Planet Fitness, the proponent argues that companies which aligned themselves with similar activist causes suffered major declines in revenue or market value. It further notes that several companies, including Lowe's and Walmart, have ended CEI participation in response to shareholder concerns. The proponent views Alphabet's continued participation as a misuse of shareholder assets and a source of avoidable risk, calling on the Board to reconsider its alignment with what it describes as a hyper-partisan advocacy agenda.

Company's Response: Alphabet's Board recommends voting against the proposal, asserting that it constitutes an attempt to micromanage the company's ordinary business operations. The company explains that decisions about participation in third-party benchmarking tools like the CEI are operational matters that should remain within the discretion of management, who are best positioned to evaluate strategic partnerships and reputational implications. Alphabet emphasises that engagement with organisations does not equate to full endorsement of their agendas and that its participation in external frameworks is guided by internal assessments and stakeholder feedback. The company highlights its established compliance program and oversight structure, which include regular Board-level monitoring of reputational, regulatory, and policy risks. It also stresses that its public policy contributions are transparent and subject to restrictions, such as prohibiting political use by recipient organisations. Given these existing safeguards and the need for management flexibility, Alphabet concludes that the proposal is not in the best interests of the company or its shareholders and recommends a vote against it.

PIRC analysis: This resolution appears to be part of a broader campaign by right-wing advocacy groups to challenge corporate diversity and inclusion frameworks by targeting participation in external benchmarking tools such as the Human Rights Campaign's Corporate Equality Index (CEI). While proponents frame the proposal as a fiduciary concern related to reputational and financial risk, the resolution is ideologically motivated and seeks to halt Alphabet's participation in a standard benchmarking practice that supports inclusive workplace policies. Participation in initiatives like the CEI promotes alignment with widely accepted norms on non-discrimination and supports the company's ability to attract and retain talent across a diverse workforce. These frameworks are part of ordinary business operations and fall within management's discretion. Ending participation would send a signal of retreat from commitments to inclusion and equality, potentially undermining employee morale and company reputation. The resolution functions more as a spoiler than a constructive governance proposal, aiming to disrupt Alphabet's existing DEI strategies rather than improve transparency or performance. A vote against the resolution is recommended.

10.. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Discrimination in GenAI

Proponent Shareholder: Inspire Investing, LLC, on behalf of William C. Cunningham

Proponent's argument: The proposal calls on Alphabet to publish a report evaluating how it oversees and mitigates risks of bias and discrimination in its generative AI (GenAI) systems, particularly regarding political or religious views. The proponent argues that GenAI tools are increasingly used to moderate content and deliver information, giving them significant influence over public discourse. The resolution expresses concern that vague policies around misinformation and hate speech could lead to the suppression of lawful and constitutionally protected viewpoints. It claims that pressure from governments, regulatory environments, and activist groups risks pushing Alphabet's AI models toward censoring controversial but legitimate perspectives. The proponent cites past incidents and reputational controversies, such as the Gemini model's handling of historical representations, to support the case that GenAI systems can produce discriminatory or ideologically biased outputs. It asserts that without enhanced oversight, Alphabet could expose itself to legal and reputational risks, particularly around freedom of speech and equal treatment. The resolution seeks transparency on how Alphabet ensures its AI systems uphold civil rights, religious freedom, and political neutrality.

Company's Response : Alphabet opposes the proposal, stating that its existing AI governance and transparency practices already address the concerns raised. The company emphasises its foundational mission to make information universally accessible, which underpins its commitment to free expression. It highlights its longstanding AI Principles, which are updated regularly, and its investments in responsible AI development, including the publication of detailed annual AI Responsibility Reports. Alphabet points to "model cards" and technical documentation-such as those accompanying the Gemini 1.5 and Imagen 3 models-as core tools for communicating safety evaluations, bias mitigation, and system limitations. These materials are designed to disclose how the company minimises unfair bias and representational harm while maintaining model safety and compliance with societal norms. Alphabet also references public statements and disclosures, including "Our Approach to the Gemini App," which outline its methodology for governing GenAI. The Board concludes that existing disclosures and processes sufficiently address stakeholder concerns and that the requested report would be duplicative. Therefore, it recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: The resolution requests a report on how Alphabet manages risks of bias in generative AI systems, particularly with regard to political and religious viewpoints. While presented as a call for fairness and civil rights, the resolution is aligned with a right-wing perspective that seeks to ensure conservative viewpoints are not excluded or marginalised in AI outputs. It reflects ongoing concerns among certain shareholder groups about how content moderation policies and AI safety protocols may interact with freedom of expression and ideological diversity. Alphabet has already disclosed substantial information through its model cards, technical reports, and Responsible AI progress updates, which outline its efforts to mitigate bias, maintain safety, and uphold responsible development standards. While the general subject of AI fairness is legitimate, the proposal does not demonstrate that Alphabet's current disclosures are insufficient or that additional reporting would significantly enhance investor understanding. Given the company's existing governance measures and the framing of the proposal, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

ARES MANAGEMENT CORPORATION AGM - 06-06-2025

1a.. Elect Michael Arougheti - Chief Executive

Chief Executive Officer. Member of the Nomination Committee. 1d.. Elect Kipp deVeer - Executive Director

Executive Director, considered to be connected with the controlling shareholder. The level of independence on the Board is not considered to be sufficient to offset the power of an Executive director who also has connections on the Board. Where there is a controlling shareholder, it would be best practice to have an independent Board and independent Lead Director to offset the power of the controlling shareholder. As the Company does not abide by this practice, opposition is recommended.

1f.. Elect David Kapalan - Executive Director

Executive director. It is noted that this executive director holds non-executive positions on another listed company.

When executives hold external NED positions, it is considered that the company should disclose how much time they dedicate to the company. In particular, it is considered that they should dedicate at least 20 working days per month to the company where they hold executive functions, as this is the equivalent of a full-time employment.

As the company has failed to disclose such time commitment, abstention is recommended.

1j.. Elect Antony P. Ressler - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair and Chair of the Nomination Committee. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of the nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 20%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

In addition, the articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

3.. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the report on the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

1.2. Re-Elect Koichi Ito - President

Incumbent President. After this meeting, the gender diversity at Board level is below 30% and no plan has been disclosed on how to meet this target. Regardless of the level of independence, it is considered that it is the responsibility of the most senior Board members to ensure that there is adequate gender diversity on the Board. 6. Shareholders' Proposal: New Restricted Stock Compensation Scheme for Directors

Proponent's argument: The proponent argues that Japanese boards, including this company's, suffer from a structural weakness: directors do not own enough company stock, resulting in poor alignment with shareholders. To remedy this, the proposal seeks approval to grant restricted shares equivalent to up to three times fixed compensation over the next three years, provided performance conditions are met. The proposal is designed to incentivise sustainable value creation by tying more of directors' economic interest to long-term shareholder returns. It also calls for the adoption of stock ownership guidelines, referencing practices in Europe and the United States, where executives are typically required to hold shares worth three to five times their basic compensation. According to the proponent, while some short-term performance-linked compensation already exists, the current scheme is insufficient. They believe a stronger link between director compensation and corporate value will encourage management to act in shareholders' best interests and demonstrate greater commitment through long-term shareholding. The objective is to embed a culture of value sharing and global-standard governance.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal. It states that the company already has a robust and well-considered Determination Policy for director compensation. This policy is designed to balance fixed compensation, performance-linked bonuses, and restricted stock awards in a way that promotes long-term corporate value. The current mix for executive directors is approximately 40 percent fixed and 60 percent performance-linked compensation, with a portion already allocated to restricted shares (capped at 200 million yen and 60,000 shares annually). Outside directors receive only fixed compensation to preserve their independence. The policy is formulated and regularly reviewed by an Executive Appointment and Compensation Committee, comprising a majority of independent outside directors. While the proponent calls for additional restricted share grants totalling 700 million yen and up to 54,000 shares annually, the Board argues that this is unnecessary. It contends that the existing compensation structure already achieves the intended goals of value sharing and performance alignment. The Board further notes that the proposal may disproportionately increase total director compensation without demonstrably enhancing incentives or governance. Therefore, the Board recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC Recommendation: PIRC opposes this resolution. While PIRC supports appropriate alignment of executive pay with long-term shareholder value, this proposal introduces substantial additional equity-linked compensation without sufficient justification. The company already employs a structured mix of fixed, performance-linked, and restricted stock compensation that is subject to oversight by an independent committee. The proposed increase in stock-based pay, separate from the existing cap and potentially equivalent to three times fixed pay, raises concerns about excessive remuneration and weakening of pay-performance alignment safeguards. Furthermore, including outside directors in equity compensation may undermine their independence. Although global best practices endorse stock ownership for executives, this must be implemented in a proportionate and transparent framework. PIRC believes the current system, as described, is sufficient for now and recommends a vote against this proposal.

Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. 4.. Shareholder Resolution: Report On Discrimination Risks Related to Charitable Partnerships

Proponent Shareholder: Bowyer Research, Inc. on behalf of the Oklahoma Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust

Proponent's argument: The proponent calls on Lululemon to publish an annual report analysing how its charitable partnerships may expose the company to risks related to discrimination based on speech or religious exercise. Citing concerns that Lululemon is associated with advocacy groups taking divisive political positions, the proposal argues that these partnerships could alienate employees, customers, and investors with differing views. Specifically, it references Lululemon's involvement with the Don't Ban Equality coalition and past donations to organisations like Black Lives Matter and Reclaim the Block, suggesting these affiliations politicise the brand and potentially harm shareholder value. The proponent also notes public criticism over Lululemon's events on capitalism and gender, indicating reputational risks tied to social and political activism. The proposal asserts that companies should avoid entangling their brands in ideological controversies and should prioritise neutrality and shareholder value. It argues that transparent reporting on the impact of charitable giving related to these issues is essential for ensuring that partnerships align with fiduciary responsibilities and broad shareholder interests.

Company's response: Lululemon opposes the proposal, stating that it already provides ample disclosure regarding its charitable giving and social impact through its publicly available Impact Report. The company explains that its philanthropic strategy, managed through the Centre for Social Impact, is focused on equity in wellbeing and is structured around movement, mental health, and community care. Partnerships are evaluated to ensure alignment with Lululemon's mission and values. The Board argues that producing an additional report would be redundant, unlikely to yield meaningful new insights, and would divert resources from core business priorities. It also notes that its current governance processes include oversight of enterprise risks, including reputational and stakeholder concerns. The company contends that the proponent's request is politically motivated and lacks a clear link to shareholder value. It affirms that its giving strategy is transparent, inclusive, and responsibly managed with input from global and regional experts. Lululemon concludes that the proposed report is unnecessary, and urges shareholders to vote against the proposal as it does not serve the company's or shareholders' best interests.

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of board diversity lie in widening the perspectives on business issues brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their customers, marketplace, supply chain and workforces. Disclosure surrounding the board's composition allows shareholders to consider board diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the Company. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution has been filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's board diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. Opposition is recommended.

CATERPILLAR INC. AGM - 11-06-2025

1e.. Re-elect David W. MacLennan - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit and Sustainability and other Public Policy Committees. As the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, there are concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice.

On 21 June 2024, 'By sending weapons, parts, components and ammunition to Israeli forces,' the above risk being 'complicit in serious violations of international human rights laws,' UN experts warn. The transfer of weapons and ammunition to Israel may "constitute serious violations of international humanitarian laws and risk complicity in international crimes, possibly including genocide," UN Special Rapporteurs for the Human Rights Council said in a statement. The experts also called on BAE Systems, Boeing, Caterpillar, Lockheed Martin, Rolls-Royce Power Systems, and many other arms firms to end sales to Israel even if they have been granted licences to do so.

Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red, indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, the company has failed to commit to net zero emissions by 2050. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the chair of the Sustainability and other Public Policy Committee.

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

5.. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Employee Charitable Giving Match

Proponent Shareholder: Bowyer Research, as representative of Kelly Aimone

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests that Caterpillar conduct an evaluation and issue a report on the potential risk of religious discrimination stemming from the company's exclusion of religious charities in its employee gift-matching program. The proponent argues that Caterpillar's policy may implicitly discriminate against religious employees by limiting their philanthropic freedom. They contend this creates a chilling effect on religious expression within the company, citing surveys indicating widespread employee concern over corporate retaliation for expressing religious views. The supporting statement emphasizes that recognizing diverse religious perspectives is essential for employee engagement and inclusion, and the current matching policy unfairly applies scrutiny only to faith-based entities. The policy is seen as vague, arbitrary, and potentially in conflict with recent Supreme Court decisions that affirm religious protections across all employment privileges. By excluding donations to religious charities or making them subject to additional conditions, Caterpillar may be failing to respect its employees' beliefs equally. The proposal seeks transparency and clarity through a formal evaluation to mitigate reputational, legal, and employee engagement risks.

Company's Response : Caterpillar recommends voting against the proposal, stating that its employee charitable giving program, operated by the Caterpillar Foundation, already functions under clear, nondiscriminatory guidelines. The company explains that the Foundation matches donations to eligible 501(c)(3) nonprofits and accredited educational institutions but excludes organizations that do not align with its charitable purpose or that are ineligible under IRS rules, including political groups and private trusts. While the Foundation does not match contributions to houses of worship, it may support donations to faith-based organizations that serve a secular purpose, are open to all, and do not use donations for religious activities. The Board argues that these criteria are standard practice across corporate match programs and do not reflect bias. Furthermore, oversight of the Foundation's activities is already in place through the company's Sustainability and other Public Policy Committee. The company believes that the existing governance structure ensures appropriate review and accountability, and as such, the requested report would be redundant. It maintains that current practices are sufficient and that the proposal's premise mischaracterizes the intent and structure of the giving program.

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides donations to a variety of charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be equally acceptable. Given the diversity that already exists among the organisations available for donations, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

*6.. Shareholder Resolution: Employment IssuesProponent Shareholder: National Center for Public Policy Research

Proponent's argument: The proponent urges Caterpillar to consider abolishing its Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) policies, citing legal and financial risks tied to such programs. The argument is based on several recent legal decisions, including SFFA v. Harvard and Muldrow v. City of St. Louis, which allegedly call into question the legality of corporate DEI initiatives. The proponent warns that these developments increase Caterpillar's exposure to litigation, particularly under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, and cites a growing trend of shareholder and consumer backlash leading other corporations to retreat from DEI efforts. Companies like John Deere, Tractor Supply, and Harley-Davidson are named as examples of firms that have recently rolled back DEI programs in response to similar concerns. The proposal critiques Caterpillar's active DEI initiatives, including hiring policies, employee resource groups, and supplier diversity efforts, arguing these actions prioritize race and sex in ways that pose financial and reputational harm to the company. Given the current legal and cultural environment, the proponent believes maintaining such policies exposes the company to avoidable risks and violates its fiduciary duty to protect shareholder value.

Company's Response : Caterpillar recommends voting against the proposal, asserting that it represents inappropriate micromanagement of the company's business operations and human capital strategy. The company emphasizes that its DEI approach is rooted in its core values-Integrity, Excellence, Teamwork, Commitment, and Sustainability-and aims to attract and retain a high-performing, inclusive global workforce. Caterpillar underscores that its employment practices comply fully with applicable non-discrimination laws across all jurisdictions where it operates. The company stresses the importance of aligning its workforce with the diverse needs of its global customers and communities, and argues that DEI initiatives are central to supporting long-term enterprise strategy. Oversight of these programs is already provided through a structured governance framework, including board-level committees responsible for risk, compliance, and public policy. The board believes that human capital management decisions are best handled by experienced senior management within existing legal boundaries. Caterpillar reaffirms its robust compliance infrastructure, emphasizing that any changes to its DEI programs will be made in alignment with legal developments and business needs. The board concludes that the actions requested in the proposal are unnecessary and not in the best interests of shareholders.

PIRC analysis: This proposal misrepresents recent legal developments to advance an ideological agenda aimed at dismantling the company's Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) policies. It wrongly interprets court decisions as a directive to abandon inclusive practices, ignoring the complexity of these rulings and the fact that empirical research has consistently shown that diverse companies financially outperform peers. The requested rollback undermines a material and strategic aspect of company's human capital management-one that supports long-term value through employee engagement, innovation, and global market alignment. Eliminating DEI programs introduces reputational, recruitment, and operational risks that far outweigh any speculative legal benefits. DEI is integral to company's ability to serve diverse markets and meet stakeholder expectations. Rejecting this proposal reflects an understanding of the long-term costs of disengagement from inclusive stakeholder governance. Opposition is recommended.

4.. Amend Articles: Officer Exculpation

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

1e.. Re-elect Brian C. Cornell - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

4.. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Affirmative Action Initiatives

Proponent Shareholder: National Center for Public Policy Research

Proponent's argument: The proposal urges Target to assess and report on how its affirmative action initiatives may create risks of actual or perceived discrimination based on protected categories under civil rights law. It cites recent legal developments that heighten the potential for legal challenges to such initiatives, including Supreme Court decisions in SFFA v. Harvard, Muldrow v. City of St. Louis, and American Alliance for Equal Rights v. Fearless Fund. The proponent argues these rulings signal growing legal risk for corporate DEI efforts. The supporting statement highlights that Target explicitly promotes DEI practices such as prioritising spending on Black-owned businesses and media, and DEI-focused hiring goals which, the proponent contends, may be considered discriminatory, immoral, or unlawful. The proposal suggests that such practices could expose Target to significant financial and reputational harm through lawsuits and civil rights claims, particularly in light of Target's large workforce and public visibility. It concludes that a formal risk assessment is urgently needed to understand and mitigate these risks.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, stating it is neither in the best interest of shareholders nor an effective use of resources. Target affirms its commitment to being an equal opportunity employer, emphasising that it complies with all relevant anti-discrimination laws and maintains a robust compliance and risk oversight framework. The Board argues that the proponent's concerns are unwarranted, as Target does not engage in discriminatory practices and any suggestion otherwise misrepresents the company's diversity initiatives. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy to attract and retain a high-performing workforce that reflects the communities Target serves. The company frames its DEI actions not as affirmative action in the legal sense, but as responsible business practices aimed at fostering respect, inclusivity, and long-term growth. Target asserts that its existing processes already address the areas highlighted by the proposal, rendering the requested risk assessment redundant and not value generating for shareholders.

PIRC analysis: DEI (Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion) policies, when appropriately implemented and transparently disclosed, can help companies better reflect the communities they serve, enhance employee engagement, and mitigate reputational and legal risks. Transparency in how these initiatives are managed and assessed allows shareholders to evaluate alignment with long-term business strategy and compliance frameworks. This resolution requests a risk assessment of affirmative action initiatives in light of evolving legal interpretations. However, the proposal appears to focus primarily on potential legal liabilities without fully acknowledging the business rationale or broader governance benefits of DEI policies. Additionally, the proposal originates from an organisation with a consistent history of challenging DEI-related corporate practices. Target already outlines its commitments to diversity and equal opportunity in its disclosures and maintains a compliance framework to address legal risks. In this context, the requested report may not provide significant additional benefit to shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

Total potential awards under all incentive schemes are considered excessive at 600% of salary, with the Performance Shares Plan (PSP) offering a maximum opportunity of 350% of base salary. The vesting period of three years is deemed insufficient for promoting long-term alignment, although the inclusion of a two-year holding period is a positive aspect. However, the performance metrics are not designed to operate interdependently, allowing vesting even if only threshold targets are met, which raises concerns. Additionally, the policy allows for dividend accrual, creating a misalignment between shareholders, who must subscribe for shares to receive dividends, and participants in the scheme, who receive dividends without such investment. Clawback and malus provisions are included in both the Annual Bonus and the PSP, which is welcomed.

No changes are proposed, and overall disclosure is deemed adequate. However, the total variable pay for the CEO can reach 275%, which is considered excessive. The Restricted Share Award lacks performance measures and instead includes an underpin, while the LTIP does not incorporate any non-financial performance metrics. This indicates that the remuneration policy is focused primarily on financial KPIs, many of which are outside an individual director's control, rather than on the operational performance of the business or the specific contributions of executives. Although the three-year performance period is not regarded as sufficiently long-term, the inclusion of a two-year holding period is a welcomed aspect. Dividends may accrue on vested awards from the date of grant, a practice that misaligns executive and shareholder interests since shareholders must subscribe for shares to receive dividends, whereas scheme participants are not required to do so.

17. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback could potentially increase the ownership stake of a controlling shareholder, whether current or potential. This could lead to an imbalance in shareholder power and undermine the interests of minority shareholders. It is crucial to avoid consolidating control in the hands of one entity, as this could hinder corporate governance and decision-making. To ensure fairness and equitable treatment of all shareholders, it won't be supported any buyback that risks increasing the ownership of a controlling party.

1.07. Elect Randall T. Mays - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nominating and Governance Committee. The Chair is not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Additionally, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nominating and Governance Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Furthermore, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Additionally, the level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

As the Company does not have a board committee in charge of their sustainability policies, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The company has been subject to litigation during the year under review and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are concerns about the potential financial and reputational impacts of this litigation on the company. On 24 May 2024, Live Nation and its Ticketmaster unit have received the first in a likely wave of new consumer antitrust lawsuits after the U.S. government and states sued to break up the two companies on Thursday. The first consumer class action to piggyback on the government cases, was filed later on 24 May, 2024 in Manhattan federal court, seeking USD 5 billion in damages on behalf of potentially millions of ticket purchasers. The cases accuse Live Nation of exerting monopoly control over the live events industry, threatening venues that work with rivals and boxing out competitors. As such, abstention is recommended to the re-election of the CEO.

0050. Approve Monetary incentive plan for the Pirelli Group's management (2025-2027 cycle)

Beneficiaries: The 2025–2027 Long-Term Incentive Plan of Pirelli & C. S.p.A. is addressed to the Group's management, including all Top Management (excluding the Chairman of the Board), General Managers, Key Managers, Senior Managers, and Executives whose roles are rated grade 20 or higher under Korn Ferry methodology. Named beneficiaries at the time of the document include Executive Vice Chairman Marco Tronchetti Provera, Chief Executive Officer Andrea Casaluci, and Corporate General Manager Francesco Tanzi, along with six other Key Managers and 253 Executives across the Group. Participation does not require any financial investment from the beneficiaries.

Type of instruments: The incentive is structured solely as a cash-based plan. No shares, stock options, or phantom shares are granted. While a portion of the payout is tied to Pirelli's stock performance relative to peers, the plan does not involve the issuance or assignment of any financial instruments.

Performance conditions: The plan is based on four performance metrics, each assigned a specific weighting: Relative Total Shareholder Return versus Tier 1 peers (40%), Cumulative Group Net Cash Flow before dividends (35%), CO Emissions Reduction (15%), and positioning in the Dow Jones Sustainability World Index Auto Component sector (10%). Although the plan specifies minimum, target, and maximum performance levels for these metrics, it does not disclose any numeric thresholds or values within this document. The targets are defined in relation to other criteria-such as relative positioning or budget assumptions-that are not disclosed. Therefore, the performance conditions are not quantified.

Vesting and lock-up period: The plan spans from 1 January 2025 to 31 December 2027. Payouts are scheduled for the first half of 2028. No lock-up applies, as the plan involves no financial instruments. Participants who resign without just cause or are dismissed for just cause before the payout date forfeit all entitlements. For Directors with delegated powers, a pro-rata payout is possible based on time served. A clawback clause applies in cases of misconduct or material misstatements in financial reporting.

PIRC's Analysis: Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure, also given potential excessiveness concerns. Opposition is recommended.

INGERSOLL RAND INC AGM - 12-06-2025

1a.. Elect Vicente Reynal - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. While the company has set out climate targets, assigned board-level accountability and provided a description on the mitigation levers it will use, its intermediate emissions targets fall short as they are aligned with a Well Below 2C pathway. Regardless of the independent representation on the Board as a whole, opposition is recommended.

Furthermore, the articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are serious concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns and it is recommended to oppose this resolution.

3. Re-elect Robert Sharpe - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair, Chair of the Nomination Committee, and member of the Remuneration Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. As there is no Chair of a Board-level Sustainability Committee up for election, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. There are serious concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. In terms of best practice, it is also considered that the Nomination Committee and the Remuneration Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. If the Company were to repurchase from persons other than the concert party all the ordinary shares for which it is seeking authority, their interest would increase from 38.24% to 44.98% of the issued share capital. COUPANG INC AGM - 12-06-2025

1a. Elect Bom Kim - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

1b. Elect Neil Mehta - Senior Independent Director

Senior Independent Director. Chair of the Remuneration Committee and member of the Nomination Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Remuneration and Nomination Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. In addition, it is considered that the Chair of the Remuneration Committee is responsible for the company's remuneration report, and owing to concerns with the company's remuneration report, opposition is recommended.

3. Amend Articles

The Board seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Incorporation as follows:

- i) Article 27 – Expands bonus eligibility to employees of both the parent and subsidiaries, introduces a minimum 2% profit allocation for non-executive employees, and reaffirms a 2% cap for director remuneration (cash only).
- ii) Article 30 – Updates the amendment record to reflect the current revision dated 13 June 2025.

The amendment to Article 27 requires allocating at least 2% of annual profit to non-executive employee bonuses, while capping director remuneration at 2%, payable only in cash. The eligibility now includes employees from both the parent and its subsidiaries, as designated by the Board. While the provision supports broader employee participation, the distribution criteria are not transparent and remain fully at the Board's discretion. 4.. Amend Existing Omnibus Plan

It is proposed to amend the 2020 Omnibus Incentive Plan by increasing the maximum number of shares of common stock available for grant by 12,030,000 shares. There are concerns with the Plan as it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. In addition, maximum award limits are excessive. As a result, opposition is recommended.

6.. Shareholder Resolution: Request to Cease CEI Participation

Proponent Shareholder: National Center for Public Policy Research

Proponent's argument: The proposal urges Best Buy to reconsider and potentially end its participation in the Human Rights Campaign's Corporate Equality Index (CEI), which the proponent describes as a partisan initiative pushing radical LGBTQ+ agendas. It argues that a perfect CEI score, such as the one Best Buy holds, reflects alignment with controversial positions that may alienate customers and harm shareholder value. The proposal equates CEI adherence with supporting gender ideology, irreversible medical procedures for minors, and the erosion of religious freedoms. It also cites reputational and financial damage experienced by companies like Bud Light, Target, and Disney following similar actions. The proponent claims such corporate activism poses a material risk, as evidenced by Best Buy's "high risk" designation by the 1792 Exchange. They point to peer companies like Lowe's, Ford, and Walmart that have exited the CEI and argue that fiduciary duty obligates Best Buy to consider a similar exit to avoid reputational and financial harm. The proposal concludes that continuing CEI participation exposes Best Buy to unnecessary risks and demands reevaluation.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, asserting that continued participation in the CEI aligns with Best Buy's core values and strategic interests. It emphasizes that the company's success is driven by its people and a culture that promotes inclusion and employee development. Best Buy's commitment to fostering an inclusive environment supports employee retention and satisfaction, with internal surveys showing strong results for inclusion and non-discrimination. The company stresses that its DEI efforts are not political but rooted in long-standing values crucial to business success and stakeholder trust. Additionally, the Board and its Compensation & Human Resources Committee actively oversee cultural development and risk management, including potential reputational risks. These efforts are regularly evaluated and are considered essential to long-term performance. The Board believes the proposal offers no meaningful benefit to shareholders, as existing oversight and policies already address the concerns raised.

PIRC's Analysis: The request to withdraw from the Corporate Equality Index (CEI) is not supported by a demonstrable governance or performance benefit; on the contrary, it appears to be based on a flawed ideological rejection of inclusive corporate culture, rather than a material governance concern. CEI participation aligns with well-established ESG frameworks and supports measurable outcomes in employee engagement, talent retention, and brand reputation—all critical components of long-term value creation. The proponent's invocation of selective market examples lacks contextual rigor and ignores the empirical evidence linking inclusive practices to stronger financial and operational performance. This proposal risks undermining a core aspect of company's human capital strategy by treating diversity as a governance failure rather than an asset. It could also create pressure to reverse programs that enhance workplace equity and resilience. Opposition is recommended.

Co-Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. Furthermore, there is no board-level responsibility for Environmental, Social and Corporate Governance issues, and there are serious concerns regarding the Company's sustainability policies and practice.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

5.2. Appoint the Auditors for Limited Review of any Other Interim Financial Reports

In April 2023, EY faced significant sanctions from German regulators due to their role in the Wirecard scandal. EY was banned from carrying out audits for firms of public interest in Germany for two years. This ban was a consequence of EY's failure in their auditing responsibilities related to Wirecard, a German payment processor that collapsed in 2020 after revealing a EUR 1.9 billion hole in its accounts. The collapse of Wirecard led to substantial losses for investors and hindering confidence in the auditing processes. Given the severity of the sanctions and the concerns raised regarding audit quality and compliance, and although the ban did not cover existing audit agreements, it is recommended to oppose the election or re-election of EY until fiscal year 2025. Aligning with the stance of regulators underscores a commitment to upholding standards of accountability and transparency within the company's governance framework.

There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration and absence of quantified targets.

CTBC FINANCIAL HOLDING CO AGM - 13-06-2025

3. Amend Articles of Incorporation

The board seeks approval of the amendments to articles:

Article 25 - Delete the paragraph which allowed the Chair to exercise Board powers during adjournment, including appointments and derivative transaction oversight.. No serious concerns;

Article 14 - The board seeks to approve amendments to the Articles of Incorporation regarding a mandate that if there is any profit for a given fiscal year, the Company shall allocate no less than 0.1% of such profit as employee profit-sharing bonuses. Of this amount, 0.08% will be distributed to non-executive employees. Bonuses may be distributed in cash or shares and may include employees of affiliated companies, as determined by the Board. The board states that these changes are introduced in response to the revised Securities and Exchange Act in Taiwan, to ensure compliance with updated statutory requirements and to promote a more equitable distribution of profit-sharing among employees.

The amendment to Article 14 requires that at least 0.1% of annual profit be allocated to employee profit-sharing bonuses, with a minimum of 0.08% directed to non-executive employees. While this aligns with recent legal reforms and promotes greater income equity, the allocation mechanism remains entirely at the board's discretion, lacks transparency, and allows inclusion of affiliate employees-potentially reducing the proportion of benefits received by CTBC Financial Holding Co's core workforce. Additionally, no performance-based criteria or distribution metrics are disclosed.

Non-Executive Directors receive a variable component on top of their fees. It is considered that non-executive directors should receive only fixed fees, as variable compensation may align them with short-term interests and not with long-term supervisory duties. These shortcomings raise governance and accountability concerns. Opposition is recommended;

Article 32 - Added a new entry for the 23rd amendment, approved on June 13, 2025, to the official list of amendment dates. No serious concerns.

LION FINANCE GROUP PLC AGM - 16-06-20251. *Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Disclosure:All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the comparator group.

Balance:The current CEO's variable pay, when compared with his salary, is considered acceptable as it represents less than 200% of his total salary. The CEO to average employee pay ratio has been estimated to be 56:1, which is considered to be excessive as it exceeds 20:1.

4. Approve Remuneration Policy

The proposed changes to the CEO's remuneration policy include a 35% salary increase from US$2,570,000 to US$3,470,000 effective 1 January 2025, with 86% continuing to be delivered in shares; retention of the existing 100% maximum annual performance-based variable award, alongside new discretion for the Committee to increase this to 200% of salary in exceptional cases, in line with the NBG Code; a one-off Retention & Recognition award of US$2,570,000 in deferred shares to be granted in 2025 only; the introduction of new performance 'gateways' that must be met, alongside standard KPIs, for deferred share awards; and an increase in the CEO's shareholding requirement from 200% to 300% of salary, including for post-employment holdings. Overall, disclosure is deemed acceptable. The remuneration structure consists of a fixed salary (partially in deferred shares) and a discretionary component based entirely on deferred shares, with no LTIP or cash bonus schemes in place. Deferred share compensation, tied to multiple annual KPIs, is the dominant element. However, the high base salary level and allowance for dividend accrual-which benefits executives without requiring share subscription-raise concerns about misalignment with shareholder interests.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Maximum variable pay for the CEO is usually 375% of the salary between the Annual Bonus (125%) LTIP (150%) and RSP awards (100% in addition to or in substitute to the LTIP), which is deemed excessive when compared to the maximum recommended limit of 200%. It would be best practise for the policy to state that at least half of the annual bonus should defer into shares for a period of at least three years, rather than "up to" to this level. The performance period for the LTIP is three-years, which is deemed overly short-term, however, an additional two year holding period applies post vesting, which is welcomed. It would be best practise for non-financial performance metrics to be included in the LTIP. Malus and clawback apply to all aspects of the variable pay.

12. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. For the purposes of recruitment, an award of shares under the RSP, above 100% of salary will be contingent on co-investment by the new CEO and the purchase of Videndum shares will be a condition of vesting. Depending on the level of co-investment that the new CEO is prepared to make, the award of shares under the Restricted Share Plan could be up to 400% of salary. Other than for the purposes of recruitment, the maximum long term share award in respect of a year will be 200% of salary where the award is made in performance shares and 100% of salary where the award comprises restricted shares. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives). Opposition is recommended. Therefore, aspects of this plan could not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

3.. Appoint the Auditors

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.11% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.07% on a three-year aggregate basis. 4.. Approval of the Block Inc. 2025 Equity Incentive Plan

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders.

On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

SHOPIFY INC AGM - 17-06-2025

1A. Elect Tobias Lütke - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Regardless of the independent representation on the Board as a whole, opposition is recommended.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. 1. Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 40 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 14.9%. This is less than 15%, thus below what shareholders could reasonably expect. 6. Amend Articles: Provide for Exculpation of Officers from Breaches of Fiduciary Duty to the Fulllest Extent Permitted by the General Corporation Law of the State of Delaware

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

Shareholders should receive sufficient notice of proposals brought forward by either management or other shareholders. As such, any other proposition brought forward in the meeting would provide insufficient time for an informed assessment. Opposition is recommended.

1. Approve Spin-Off of Maynilad Water Services, Inc

The board seeks to approve the spin-off and list Maynilad Water Services on the Philippine Stock Exchange, offering up to 30.33% of its enlarged share capital. Shareholders may receive shares or cash via a Distribution in Specie. The Board justifies the move as necessary to comply with Maynilad's legislative listing requirement by January 2027 and to enhance governance and funding flexibility. The offer may rise PHP 37.4 billion.

Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The circular contains sufficient details of the transaction, but there is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Abstention is recommended.

RICARDO PLC EGM - 18-06-2025

1. Shareholder Resolution: Mr Mark Clare be removed from office as a director of the Company and Chairman of the Board with immediate effect.

Shareholder Proposal: This shareholder resolution, requisitioned under Section 303 of the UK Companies Act 2006, proposes the immediate removal of Mr. Mark Clare from his role as Chair and director of Ricardo plc. The proposal has been submitted by Science Group plc and its nominee Ropemaker Nominees Limited, who collectively hold approximately 20.08% of the company's share capital.

Proponent's argument: The formal requisition was submitted on 30 April 2025 by Science Group plc, a substantial shareholder holding over 12.4 million shares (20.08% of issued capital). While the requisition notice itself is not included in full in the Ricardo circular, the context provided indicates Science Group's dissatisfaction with the company's strategic and financial direction, and its desire to remove Mr. Clare as a first step toward further board changes. From the Company's summary of Science Group's stated reasoning: Science Group set out its belief that the Company should be focusing on improving operating performance and should manage itself under three operating divisions (EE, Rail and combined A&I/PP)".However, the board notes that this structural strategy is already being implemented by management and accuses Science Group of offering "no credible alternative" and instead engaging in a "hostile campaign designed to destabilise the Company."

Company's response: Ricardo's board strongly and unanimously opposes the resolution. They assert that: "Your Board does not believe the Resolution is in the best interests of the Company and Shareholders as a whole". The board presents a robust defence of Mr. Clare's leadership and strategic credentials. Under his chairmanship, Ricardo has been implementing a five-year transformation strategy aimed at becoming a world-leading environmental and energy transition (EET) consultancy, diversifying from traditional automotive markets into sustainable industrial sectors.They highlight key achievements: i) 85% of underlying operating profits now stem from EET, ii) H1 2024/25 order intake rose 11% YoY, and 96% of FY24/25 revenue from consulting is already secured, iii)Anticipated cash conversion above 85% and net debt at the lower end of analyst guidance and iv) The company also criticizes Science Group's tactics, portraying them as opportunistic and self-serving: "Your Board is concerned that Science Group is acting entirely opportunistically... to further its own self-interest at the expense of the Company's other Shareholders." The board further notes: "Science Group's attempt to remove your Chair is only the first step in its plan to gain control of the Board and the Company without paying a premium for that control."

PIRC analysis: This resolution implicates broader governance concerns related to board independence and minority shareholder influence. While it is legitimate for shareholders to challenge underperformance, the removal of a board chair without a compelling, transparent alternative plan and without due consideration to strategic continuity is problematic. The case made by the requisitioning shareholder appears opportunistic. The board has demonstrated progress against its long-term transformation plan and has provided reasonable evidence of operational improvements and cost discipline. Furthermore, Science Group's prior corporate interventions-involving forced leadership changes followed by discounted acquisitions-suggest a pattern of undermining companies to pursue control without offering strategic transparency or full shareholder value. Ricardo's board, meanwhile, has offered clear, data-supported arguments for continuing its transformation agenda under Mr. Clare's leadership, along with evidence of increasing financial stability and growth in non-automotive sectors. The proponent's failure to present a detailed alternative strategy diminishes the legitimacy of this requisition.

PIRC Recommendation: PIRC recommends a vote AGAINST the resolution. Board leadership changes must be guided by long-term shareholder value and transparency-not tactical control by a single minority shareholder. Maintaining strategic stability at Ricardo is in the best interest of the broader shareholder base.

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended. As there is no formal Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

6. Amendment of Sec. 16 Articles of Association

It is proposed to amend the articles in order to allow virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing virtual-only meetings.

9. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

10. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In

9. Approve Remuneration Policy

The proposed changes include allowing executive directors to participate in the newly introduced Stretch Performance Incentive Plan (SPIP) for 300 senior leaders in 2025 and increasing the IAG CEO's shareholding requirement from 350% to 400% of salary to align with his enhanced incentive opportunity under the SPIP. However, the potential total variable pay of up to 650% of salary is viewed as excessive, far exceeding the commonly accepted threshold of 200%. Regarding the annual incentive award, if shareholding guidelines are unmet, 50% of the bonus is deferred into shares, whereas if met, 80% is paid in cash and only 20% deferred; this structure is considered inadequate, with a more appropriate structure being a 50/50 split between cash and shares, with at least a three-year deferral period. The plan's performance metrics do not operate interdependently, meaning vesting can occur without meeting all thresholds, which undermines accountability. The three-year vesting period for the restricted share plan is not seen as sufficiently long-term despite a welcomed two-year holding period. Furthermore, the proposed Executive Directors SPIP relies solely on operating profit as its performance metric, contrary to best practice which recommends at least two quantifiable and interdependent performance metrics, including non-financial ones. The absence of non-financial performance indicators is seen as a flaw, as they are crucial for evaluating executives' broader contributions to the company's long-term performance. Financial metrics alone may not adequately reflect individual efforts, and their volatility is often outside a director's control. Additionally, dividend accruals are not restricted, misaligning executive and shareholder interests since executives receive dividends without the same risk as shareholders. Nonetheless, malus and clawback provisions are in place for all variable pay, offering some mitigation.

COINBASE GLOBAL, INC. AGM - 18-06-2025

1.01. Elect Brian Armstrong - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

Lastly, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. 13. Establishment of a long-term programme granting Company treasury shares to members of the Company Board of Directors and members belonging to the top management of the Company or/and of the affiliated with the Company corporations

The Board proposes the approval of a new incentive plan. Under the plan, members of the Company Board of Directors and members belonging to the top management of the Company will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

15. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

16. Approval of the revised Directors' Remuneration Policy according to article 110 of the Law 4548/2018

The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration.

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. A dividend of 60 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 100.1%. 23. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Nomination Committee and designated non-executive director workforce engagement. Not considered independent as Mr. Moody assumed the interim role of Executive Chairman from 1 July 2020 to 8 March 2021. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. In terms of best practice, it is also considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. Additionally, as there is no Chair of a Board-level Sustainability Committee up for election, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability. Furthermore, it would be preferred that companies appoint directors from the workforce rather than designate a non-executive director (NED). NIPPON TELEGRAPH & TELEPHONE AGM - 19-06-202514. Shareholder Resolution: Restrict Board Membership to Japanese Nationals

Proponent's argument: The proposal seeks to amend the Articles of Incorporation to prohibit individuals without Japanese nationality from serving as Members of the Board. The proponent frames this as a symbolic initiative aimed at reinforcing reliance on internal talent rather than what they describe as an overemphasis on hiring external or foreign individuals for leadership roles. The proponent expresses concern that appointing non-Japanese board members may appear fashionable or externally appealing but could undermine the value and contributions of long-serving internal employees. The proposal suggests that if foreign participation is seen as necessary for open dialogue, then the corporate culture itself should be reformed instead. Emphasis is placed on the belief that NTT already has a deep pool of capable internal personnel and should prioritise their development and recognition. The intended goal is to promote internal cohesion and maximise the value of existing human capital within the company.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, stating that such a restriction would limit the company's ability to respond flexibly to a global business environment. NTT is actively working to expand its international operations, and the inclusion of board members with global management experience is considered essential. The company has already nominated a non-Japanese board candidate in its own proposal, based on their qualifications and global business insight. The Board emphasises that appointments are made through a rigorous and independent Nomination Committee, which is majority comprised of independent outside members. This committee has also opposed the proposal, underscoring its potential to weaken governance effectiveness. The Board believes that disqualifying candidates based on nationality would undermine diversity and restrict access to critical expertise. It concludes that such a policy would not serve the company's or shareholders' best interests and should not be included in the Articles of Incorporation.

PIRC analysis: This proposal would restrict board eligibility based solely on nationality, which is contrary to principles of diversity, inclusion, and merit-based governance. Limiting director roles to Japanese nationals would exclude individuals who may bring valuable international experience and skills that benefit the company's global strategy. Diversity of backgrounds, including nationality, strengthens board oversight and decision-making. While it is important to support internal talent development, doing so by excluding others on the basis of nationality would reduce the board's ability to draw from the widest possible pool of qualified candidates. Restrictive criteria of this nature risk weakening the company's governance and undermining stakeholder confidence. On this basis, opposition to the resolution is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

16. Shareholder Resolution: Distribution of Earned Surplus

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests a special interim dividend of ¥10.00 per share in cash, with September 30, 2025 as the record date. The proponent argues that the company's financial disclosures indicate no constraints on its financial standing and that it has ample capacity to increase shareholder returns. The reference materials for the 2024 general meeting offered only a brief mention of capital policy and made no explicit reference to financial standing as a constraint. Given the stable earnings of the company's domestic operations and low business risk, the proponent believes there is no need to retain excessive equity levels. The proposed dividend would amount to less than one-tenth of current shareholders' equity and is therefore unlikely to impair financial stability. By returning a modest portion of accumulated surplus to shareholders, the proposal aims to improve capital efficiency and shareholder value. The proponent contends that this distribution is consistent with long-term shareholder interests and a disciplined capital allocation framework.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal, arguing that it does not align with the company's long-term capital policy. The company prioritises steady and sustainable returns to shareholders through consistent dividend increases and flexible share buybacks. It has raised its annual dividend for 14 consecutive years and plans further increases. In FY2024, share buybacks totalled approximately ¥5.7 trillion, with a further ¥200 billion authorised for FY2025. Retained earnings are used to maintain financial soundness and invest in long-term growth areas. The company's medium-term strategy aims to enhance its cash generation capacity through strategic investment, which supports sustainable value creation and future profit returns. The Board considers the proposed special dividend a short-term measure that could weaken the long-term capital allocation framework. It believes that maintaining a stable and forward-looking return policy is more beneficial to shareholders over time. As such, the Board concludes that the proposed special dividend is not appropriate.

PIRC analysis: This proposal seeks to mandate a special interim cash dividend of ¥10.00 per share, separate from the ordinary dividend. While shareholder returns are an important component of capital policy, it is not considered good practice to fix dividend payments in advance without reference to full financial results and strategic capital needs. Dividend decisions should remain within the discretion of the board, informed by the company's financial performance, investment plans, and balance sheet position at the time. The company already maintains a policy of steadily increasing dividends and returning capital through substantial share buybacks. Mandating a one-off special dividend outside this framework could undermine flexibility and conflict with long-term capital planning. On this basis, opposition to the resolution is recommended.

1.1. Elect Mibe Toshihiro - President

Incumbent President. After this meeting, the gender diversity at Board level is below 30% and no plan has been disclosed on how to meet this target. Regardless of the level of independence, it is considered that it is the responsibility of the most senior Board members to ensure that there is adequate gender diversity on the Board. Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red (+), indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. Independent Non-Executive Chair and Chair of the Nominating and Governance Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the Chair of Nominating and Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.23% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.20% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. 4.. Approve the Dollar Tree, Inc. 2025 Employee Stock Purchase Plan.

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. The proposed one-off option grant to the newly appointed CEO, Mr. Rafael de Oliveira, effectively constitutes a Golden Hello. While the grant includes share price-based vesting multipliers, it lacks clear, pre-defined financial or non-financial performance targets. This deviates from best practices in executive pay, where performance-based awards should be tied to a balanced scorecard of internal metrics. Furthermore, the award was granted conditionally ahead of shareholder approval, and its size - with the potential to double - raises concerns. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

We consider this to be an excessive premium that may not represent a prudent use of shareholder capital. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Maximum variable pay for the CEO is 325% of the salary in exceptional circumstances, and 300% usually, both of which limits are deemed excessive when compared to the maximum recommended limit of 200%. It would be best practise for at least half of the annual bonus to defer into shares for a period of at least three years, regardless of the Directors' shareholdings. The performance period for the RSP is three-years, which is deemed overly short-term, however, an additional two year holding period applies post vesting, which is welcomed. It would be best practise for the RSP to be tied to non-financial performance metrics, however, this cannot be determined at this time. Malus and clawback apply to all aspects of the variable pay.

3. Amend Articles: Compensation Distribution to Non-Executive Employees

The Company proposes amending its Articles of Incorporation to allocate at least 1% of annual employee remuneration to non-executive employees, in line with regulatory requirements. However, the measure grants broad discretion to the Board over allocation methods, remuneration form, and eligibility, without disclosure or shareholder approval. This raises concerns over transparency and fairness. Inclusion of staff from subsidiaries may also dilute the benefit to core employees. Additionally, non-executive directors should not receive variable pay, which may misalign incentives. An oppose vote is recommended.

Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

RAKUS CO LTD AGM - 20-06-20251. *Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 4.5 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 10.2%. which at less than 15%, is below what shareholders could reasonably expect. Opposition is recommended.

HACHIJUNI BANK AGM - 20-06-2025

6. Shareholder Resolution: Proposal for Fixed Dividend Payout of 71.00 Yen per Share

Proponent's argument: The proposal calls for a dividend of 71.00 yen per share, reflecting a 100% payout ratio for the fiscal year. The proponent argues this is necessary to improve capital efficiency and protect shareholder value, given the Bank's long-standing PBR below 1.0 and excessive net worth accumulation. Despite having ample capital and liquidity, including ¥638.6 billion in cross-shareholdings-equivalent to 150% of its market capitalisation-the Bank's return on equity remains weak. The proposal frames aggressive capital return as a corrective measure to counteract ineffective capital deployment and sluggish share price performance. It also criticises the Bank's dividend targets as vague and insufficiently linked to performance or capital discipline. The proposed payout is positioned as a responsible step toward breaking a cycle of shareholder value erosion and holding management accountable for inefficient capital allocation.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, arguing that its current dividend strategy balances shareholder returns with long-term capital needs, including support for regional growth and financial resilience. It highlights that dividends have steadily increased and that its approach aligns with its role as a regional financial institution. The Board believes that maintaining financial flexibility is essential for sustaining corporate value and enabling growth investments. It views the proposed 100% payout ratio as short-sighted and potentially harmful to its long-term ability to support customers and navigate future uncertainties. The Bank maintains that its dividend policy is appropriate and consistent with its strategic objectives, and sees no need for the proposed change.

PIRC analysis: Mandating a fixed dividend before reviewing annual financial results limits the Board's flexibility and may not reflect the Bank's performance or capital needs. Dividend decisions should be based on current financial conditions, and best practice includes offering shareholders a choice between cash or scrip. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

7. Shareholder Resolution: Initiate Share Repurchase Program

Proponent's argument: This proposal requests that the Bank acquire up to 20 million of its own shares (valued up to ¥18.02 billion) within one year. The proponent argues that the Bank's excessive capital, driven by large cross-shareholdings, results in inefficient capital allocation and a persistently low PBR below 1.0. While the Bank has pledged future improvements to ROE, it lacks a clear and timely path to achieve this. The resolution seeks to break this cycle by initiating a defined buyback program, funded by the Bank's strong capital position and excess marketable securities. The proponent claims this would improve capital efficiency, support shareholder value, and pose no material financial or systemic risk given the Bank's 20% capital adequacy ratio. The proposed buyback is equivalent to only 4% of market capitalisation and 6% of average trading volume-levels considered absorbable by the market. The buyback is framed as a practical and necessary step to correct valuation inefficiencies and protect minority shareholder interests.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, noting that treasury stock acquisitions are already a core element of its capital return policy. The Bank emphasises a balanced approach that also prioritises growth investments and financial soundness to sustain long-term value. Recent buybacks include ¥10 billion in FY2023 and ¥20.5 billion in FY2024, with plans for another ¥10 billion in FY2025. The Board argues that shareholder returns should remain flexible and responsive to financial conditions, business plans, and stock price movements. It believes the proposal's fixed buyback terms fail to account for this broader context and could impose unnecessary financial constraints. The Bank maintains that its existing capital return strategy-based on timing, liquidity, and financial prudence-is more appropriate and rejects the prescriptive nature of the proposed resolution.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the proponent, an oppose vote is recommended.

3. Shareholders' Proposal: Name Change

Proponent's argument:The proponent calls for a change in the company name from "SOMPO Holdings, Inc." to "Shinrai Holdings Kabushiki Kaisha" (Reliable Holdings, Inc. in English) by amending Article 1 of the Articles of Incorporation. The proposal argues that the current name, "SOMPO," is associated with former Representative Director Mr. Kengo Sakurada, whose leadership prioritized corporate growth over customer trust, as highlighted by regulatory sanctions and criticisms from Japan's Financial Services Agency. The proponent claims the existing name perpetuates a corporate culture that puts company interests above those of stakeholders. Given the Company's declaration of a "fresh start," the shareholder argues a symbolic and substantive name change is appropriate to reflect a renewed commitment to "Shinrai" - meaning "trust" - across all stakeholder relationships. The proposal notes that the company previously changed its name in 2014 and suggests that group companies should also follow the naming revision to maintain consistency. Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal to amend Article 1 and change the Company's name. Management argues that "SOMPO" is already well-established and widely recognized, not only for the parent company but also for its key subsidiary, Sampo Japan Insurance Inc. Since adopting the SOMPO name in 2016, the Company has been committed to its purpose of fostering a secure and healthy society, now rephrased in 2024 as "For a future of health, wellbeing and financial protection." The Board maintains that the current name effectively supports the Group's vision and corporate strategy, contributing to its brand value and public recognition. The proposed change is deemed unnecessary, especially at a time when the Company is focused on enhancing its role in addressing societal challenges and delivering value to a diverse set of stakeholders.

PIRC Recommendation: The proposal is overly symbolic and lacks a clear demonstration that changing the corporate name would lead to measurable improvements in governance, accountability, or stakeholder trust. The costs and disruption of rebranding are not justified by the proponent's rationale, and management has articulated a coherent purpose aligned with the existing brand identity. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5. Shareholders' Proposal: Change Location of HQ

Proponent's argument: The proposal seeks to amend Article 3 of the Articles of Incorporation to formally state that the Company's head office is located in Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo. The proponent argues that the existing Sampo Japan Head Office Building in Nishi-Shinjuku, completed in 1976, is outdated and lacks adequate earthquake resistance, even after the addition of vibration control dampers. For comparison, the Tokio Marine Building—constructed in 1974—has already been demolished and is being rebuilt to current seismic safety standards. The proponent suggests that the Company relocate its head office to the newer "Sampo Japan Kasumigaseki Building," which complies with the latest earthquake resistance regulations. The amendment is framed as a necessary step to ensure operational safety, employee well-being, and long-term continuity in the event of natural disasters such as large-scale earthquakes.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposed amendment to relocate the head office. Management asserts that the current Sampo Japan Head Office Building underwent reinforcement work to improve earthquake resistance following the Great East Japan Earthquake. In addition, the Company has developed robust preparedness systems and manuals for responding to natural disasters, including large-scale earthquakes. Based on these measures, the Company believes that the current headquarters is sufficiently resilient and that the proposed change to the Articles of Incorporation is unwarranted. The Board maintains that the current facilities meet necessary safety and operational standards, and therefore sees no basis for initiating a formal change in head office location.

PIRC Recommendation: PIRC recommends voting against this resolution. While the proponent raises legitimate concerns about seismic safety, the Company has provided evidence that the existing building has been structurally reinforced and that comprehensive disaster preparedness systems are in place. The case for relocation and formal amendment lacks compelling urgency or demonstrable benefit over current arrangements. Given the disruption and cost such a move could entail, without clear justification, the proposal does not merit support. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

7. Shareholders' Proposal: Terms of Office

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes an amendment to Article 21 of the Articles of Incorporation to impose a maximum term limit of five fiscal years for any Director. The proposal responds to what the proponent describes as excessive tenure and unchecked influence of former Director Mr. Kengo Sakurada, who allegedly dominated the Board, undermining transparency and accountability. The proponent argues that Sakurada's prolonged tenure fostered a culture where negative information was suppressed and oversight mechanisms, such as the Nomination Committee, failed to function independently. The proponent claims some Outside Directors, including the Nomination Committee Chair, were complicit—motivated by the prospect of being renominated themselves. Specific individuals, such as Mr. Scott Trevor Davis and Mr. Isao Endo, are mentioned as examples of Directors exceeding five fiscal years of service. By capping tenure at five years, the proposal aims to prevent undue concentration of power and to foster more independent oversight on the Board.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal. It argues that tenure length alone should not disqualify individuals from serving; what matters is whether a Director fulfills their fiduciary responsibilities effectively. The Company selects Directors and Executive Officers based on established policies, with nominations reviewed by the Nomination Committee and approved by shareholders at general meetings. The Board maintains that this process ensures appropriate oversight and renewal without the need to impose a fixed term limit through the Articles of Incorporation. In the Company's view, the flexibility to retain experienced individuals when justified is essential for stability and strategic continuity, and the proposed amendment is therefore deemed unnecessary.

PIRC Recommendation: While we acknowledge the risks associated with excessively long board tenure, especially in cases where power becomes entrenched, we set a nine-year maximum as our own threshold. The proposed five-year limit is overly restrictive and could prematurely disqualify effective Directors. Nonetheless, the proposal raises valid concerns about succession planning, independence, and board refreshment, which merit attention. Abstention is recommended.

The Board proposes the approval of a new incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to extend the insurance cover to the members of the governing bodies of all Group companies. The insurance policy covers the civil liability (and related legal and advisory expenses) of the members of the governing bodies of all Group companies versus third parties, deriving from non-fraudulent conduct in breach of the obligations deriving from the law or intrinsic to their duties. In addition, the insurance does not explicitly exclude that it would cover also liabilities arising from fraudulent conduct, and fines handed down by the supervisory authorities. On this basis, shareholders would pay wilful violations and fraudulent conduct led by directors and executives. Opposition is thus recommended.

15. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. While the percentage limit is within acceptable bounds, the extended time frame raises concerns about long-term shareholder value and potential market impact. This extended period could lead to excessive buybacks beyond the intended scope, which is not in line with standard practices. Given the duration exceeds the typical 18-month limit, opposition is recommended.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

The proposed changes to the executive remuneration policy include revised wording in the pensions section to ensure ongoing alignment between executive director contributions and those of the UK wider workforce, allowing for flexibility if the workforce rate changes. Additionally, an amendment to the Annual Bonus policy would give the Remuneration Committee discretion to reduce deferral requirements-currently, any amount earned over 100% of salary is deferred for three years-if an executive director has met their shareholding requirement. However, concerns remain over the total potential variable pay, which is deemed excessive, with the CEO eligible for up to 475% and the CFO up to 450% of base salary. The bonus deferral mechanism, whereby amounts over 100% are deferred into shares, is considered inadequate; a more appropriate approach would involve a 50/50 split between cash and shares deferred for at least three years to improve long-term alignment. The Performance Share Plan (PSP) also raises concerns, as its three-year performance period is not viewed as sufficiently long-term, and its metrics do not operate interdependently-allowing vesting without all targets being met. Moreover, dividends accrue from the grant date even though executives do not invest capital, misaligning their interests with those of shareholders. Positively, the inclusion of malus and clawback provisions across all variable pay components provides an important safeguard.

OMRON CORP AGM - 24-06-20251. *Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 52 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 126.2%. which at more than 100% payout, is considered unwise given the capital maintenance needs of the company.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Amendment of Article of Association

It is proposed to amend the Articles of Incorporation to allow Omron Corporation to hold virtual-only shareholder meetings without specifying a physical location, enabling greater flexibility in response to digitalisation, pandemics, or disasters. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing virtual-only meetings.

CARMAX INC AGM - 24-06-2025

1c. Elect Thomas J. Folliard - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board. The Chair is not considered to be independent as the director was employed by the Company as President and Chief Executive Officer from 2006 to 2016. The Chair is also not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

1b.. Elect L. John Doerr - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

As the Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

4.. Amend Articles: The approval of an amendment to our amended and restated certificate of incorporation to reflect certain Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation.

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). 8.. Shareholder Resolution: Request for Report on Risks Related to Affirmative Action Initiatives

Proponent Shareholder: National Center for Public Policy Research (NCPPR)

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests a report evaluating how Mastercard's affirmative action programs may create legal and reputational risks, particularly following recent U.S. court decisions. The proposal cites the 2023 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in SFFA v. Harvard, which banned race-based college admissions, as a precedent with implications for corporate diversity practices. Further rulings in Muldrow v. City of St. Louis and Fearless Fund cases suggest increased vulnerability for companies engaged in race-based employment or grantmaking initiatives. The proposal warns that Mastercard's public commitments including increasing Black leadership, investing $500 million in Black communities, and boosting procurement from Black-owned businesses could expose the company to lawsuits and financial liability. It argues that if only a fraction of affected stakeholders pursue legal action, costs could reach into the billions. The proponent emphasises that a formal risk assessment is essential for protecting shareholder value in light of a shifting legal environment surrounding race-based policies.

Company's response: Mastercard's Board opposes the proposal, affirming that its diversity and inclusion initiatives are both lawful and central to long-term business success. The company integrates financial inclusion into its core strategy, aiming to bring more people into the digital economy to drive growth and value. Mastercard operates in over 220 countries and employs more than 35,000 people worldwide, and it asserts that an inclusive and equitable culture enhances its ability to attract and retain top talent. The company affirms its strict adherence to equal employment opportunity laws and maintains that all hiring and employment decisions are based solely on job related qualifications. It also conducts regular evaluations of its practices to ensure legal compliance, including in light of recent court decisions. The Board argues that Mastercard's community and belonging efforts are fully compliant with civil rights law and appropriately overseen by the Board and relevant committees. As such, the requested report is considered unnecessary and unlikely to provide meaningful additional insight for shareholders.

PIRC analysis: This proposal appears to be politically motivated, reflecting broader ideological opposition to corporate diversity and inclusion efforts. It frames Mastercard's DEI initiatives as legal risks without providing clear evidence of non-compliance or material shareholder harm. The company's commitments are transparently disclosed, grounded in business strategy, and aligned with legal obligations. The proposal seeks to challenge established inclusion practices rather than improve governance or oversight. Opposition is recommended.

2. Shareholder Resolution: Amend Company Name to "Nomura Securities Group Inc."

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes a change to the company's trade name, suggesting it be amended to "Nomura Securities Group Inc." in English and "Kabushiki Kaisha Nomura Shoken Grupu Honsha" in Japanese. The proponent argues this change would reaffirm the company's original founding purpose of enriching the nation through the securities business, in light of recent reputational challenges. Emphasising the founder's philosophy, the proposal suggests that referencing "securities" directly in the name would demonstrate a return to core values, enhance corporate governance, and solidify the company's brand identity. It is also proposed as a symbolic commitment coinciding with the company's centennial anniversary, marking a recommitment to the firm's societal role and stakeholder trust.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal, citing that the current trade name, "Nomura Holdings, Inc.," has been in use since the 2001 transition to a holding company structure and is widely recognised globally. They argue the name reflects the firm's diversified business across wealth management, investment, banking, and wholesale services. The board asserts that corporate governance reforms and purpose-driven statements have already been adopted to address reputational challenges and guide long-term strategic direction. They see no clear link between changing the company name and enhancing governance or stakeholder value, concluding that maintaining the existing name better serves brand continuity and shareholder interests.

PIRC analysis: This proposal raises a valid point about the symbolic value of reinforcing the company's founding identity, particularly in light of recent reputational challenges. However, the current trade name, "Nomura Holdings, Inc.," accurately reflects the broader scope of the company's operations, including wealth management, investment banking, and asset management. Changing the name to emphasise the securities business may not fully represent the diversified nature of the group and could introduce confusion or brand dilution. Decisions regarding branding and naming are typically best managed by the Board, given their oversight of strategic direction. As the potential benefits of the proposed change are not clearly demonstrated, an oppose vote is recommended.

As there are three or more outside directors, it is considered that there is adequate outside presence on the Board. Based on PIRC's overall assessment of the company's transition planning and climate governance capabilities, the company was rated Red (+), indicating that it falls significantly short of PIRC's expectations. In particular, the company has failed to establish a dedicated board committee or individual with oversight for climate change. As such, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the chair of the board.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Request for Dividend Payment and Disclosure of Interim Dividend Policy

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes a year-end dividend of 20 yen per common share for fiscal year 2024 and requests the presentation of a clear policy on interim dividends. The argument is based on the ongoing absence of dividend payments, which the proponent claims undermines the company's commitment to returning profits to shareholders. They argue that continued non-payment damages shareholder trust and that establishing a transparent dividend policy is necessary to restore confidence and signal a commitment to fair capital distribution. The proposal does not request a permanent change to the Articles of Incorporation, but instead aims to prompt management to act responsibly and communicate a stable approach to shareholder returns, especially given the prolonged suspension of dividends. The requested dividend is framed as a modest step toward resuming profit-sharing and rebuilding investor confidence in the company's financial management practices.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, citing recent financial results and uncertain market conditions. The company recorded a net loss of 670.9 billion yen and negative free cash flow of 242.8 billion yen from its automobile business in fiscal year 2024. Given these financial challenges, the Board decided on April 24, 2025, to forgo a year-end dividend, as disclosed in its official announcement regarding dividends of surplus. Furthermore, the outlook for fiscal year 2026 remains uncertain due to external risks such as changes in United States trade policy, with key financial indicators still undecided. In this context, the Board emphasizes the importance of maintaining financial flexibility and prioritising the successful execution of its restructuring plan, "Re:Nissan." The Board argues that decisions on dividends must be made based on a comprehensive assessment of business conditions, profitability, cash flow, and capital needs. It believes that the requested dividend would undermine prudent capital management and therefore considers the proposal inappropriate at this time.

PIRC analysis: This resolution requests the payment of a specific dividend of 20 yen per share and calls for a clearer policy on interim dividends. While returning value to shareholders is an important principle, it is generally inappropriate to mandate fixed dividend payments in advance of year-end financial results. The company reported a significant net loss and negative free cash flow for fiscal year 2024, and has chosen to suspend dividend payments to preserve liquidity and support its restructuring efforts. Forcing a distribution under these financial conditions could compromise financial stability. Dividend decisions should remain within the discretion of the board, guided by financial performance and capital needs. On this basis, opposition to the proposal is recommended.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Ban on Revolving Door to Listed Subsidiaries or Listed Affiliates

Proponent's argument: The proponent calls for an amendment to the Articles of Incorporation that would prevent the JAL Group from supporting the appointment of former executives or employees who have served in the Group for five years or more as directors at listed subsidiaries or affiliates. The proposal specifically addresses concerns about past appointments, such as a former JAL executive serving on the board of Airport Facilities Co., Ltd. (AFC), despite lacking relevant expertise in capital allocation and real estate investment. The proponent argues that such revolving-door practices harm both the valuation of affiliates and the JAL Group's shareholder value, citing AFC's long-standing P/B ratio below 1 as evidence of poor governance and underperformance. They warn that inappropriate appointments from within the Group create inefficiencies and potential deadweight loss, and that minority shareholders in affiliated listed companies are particularly vulnerable. The proposed ban aims to strengthen independent oversight and prevent perceived self-serving nominations that do not align with value creation.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, arguing that rigid restrictions on director appointments would undermine its ability to nominate qualified candidates. It states that it currently selects candidates based on their potential to contribute to the value of affiliates and considers board composition, expertise, and minority shareholder interests. The Company also emphasizes that AFC's nomination process is independent, led by a committee with a majority of outside directors and audit supervisors. According to the Board, the appointment of JAL-related directors has followed proper governance processes and received strong support from independent shareholders, as shown by a 97 percent approval rate at AFC's last shareholder meeting. Additionally, the Board cautions that embedding such constraints in the Articles of Incorporation would inappropriately restrict management discretion and future business decisions. They affirm that the Group does not control AFC.

and is not involved in its internal decision-making, and that all director nominees from the Group act in the interest of AFC.

PIRC analysis: This proposal seeks to impose a permanent ban on former JAL Group executives or employees from serving as directors at listed subsidiaries or affiliates, if they have been with the Group for five years or more. While concerns about excessive internal appointments and poor capital oversight at affiliates are valid, this approach is overly rigid. Decisions on director appointments at listed entities should remain subject to shareholder vote, with sufficient transparency and independent oversight. A blanket prohibition restricts flexibility and could prevent the appointment of qualified individuals who bring valuable institutional knowledge. Governance concerns tied to the so-called revolving door are better addressed through structured cooling-off periods, which balance independence with the ability to access relevant experience. On this basis, a vote against the proposal is recommended.

3. Shareholder Resolution: Initiate Share Repurchase Program

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes a repurchase of up to 30 million shares, valued at up to 100 billion yen, within one year, alongside a transfer of 100 billion yen from reserves to retained earnings. They argue that the Company holds surplus cash and assets-including over 260 billion yen in cash and deposits, investment securities, and unused real estate-and has ample room to return capital to shareholders without sacrificing business investment. The proposal also notes that the Company's stock is undervalued, with its PBR and PER at multi-decade lows. Repurchasing shares would, in their view, increase value per share more effectively than higher dividends. The proponent contends that such a move would signal capital efficiency, address low market valuations, and could be funded in part by dissolving underperforming cross-shareholdings such as those with Fuji Media Holdings. They argue that the scale of the proposed repurchase is feasible given the Company's financial position and would contribute positively to shareholder returns.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, stating that it would significantly exceed its capital return targets and undermine the Company's strategic flexibility. The proposed repurchase would double the 100 billion yen already announced under the current policy and raise the total payout ratio to nearly 300 percent, well above the 70 percent target in the Company's Medium-term Management Plan. The Company has already repurchased over 6.4 million shares for nearly 20 billion yen in early 2025 and plans to continue buybacks in a flexible and measured manner. Management argues that allocating an additional 100 billion yen could threaten future growth investments, including R&D and global expansion efforts. They also note that the company's return on equity and capital efficiency are already being addressed through a revised capital policy and a newly announced six-year plan. Finally, the Board cautions against locking in large, short-term capital distributions without regard for evolving business conditions, stating this could stall growth and harm long-term shareholder value.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the proponent, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5. Shareholder Resolution: Cancellation of Treasury Shares

Proponent's argument: This resolution calls for the cancellation of all treasury shares held by the Company, excluding only those required for stock-based remuneration, contingent on the approval of a preceding amendment to the Articles of Incorporation. The proponent argues that such cancellation would directly enhance shareholder value and reduce governance related concerns tied to the potential future use of treasury shares. By eliminating unused shares from the balance sheet, the company would signal a commitment to capital efficiency and reinforce investor confidence, particularly in light of persistent stock undervaluation. The measure is presented as a logical extension of the structural amendment previously proposed and is intended to ensure full execution of a more disciplined capital policy.

Company's response: The Board opposes the resolution, maintaining that the cancellation of all treasury shares would unnecessarily limit the Company's strategic flexibility. They argue that treasury shares are a valuable tool for executing management strategies-such as mergers, acquisitions, or employee incentives-under evolving market conditions. The Company reviewed the need for cancellation in light of the proposal but concluded that the move is unwarranted at this time and may not serve the long-term interests of shareholders. Instead, the Board prefers to retain discretion over treasury share use and cancellation based on future assessments. They reaffirm a commitment to reviewing cancellation options if they align with corporate value enhancement but assert that a blanket cancellation now would restrict the Board's ability to act responsively.

PIRC analysis: This resolution proposes the full cancellation of all treasury shares held by the Company, excluding only those required for stock remuneration. While reducing excess treasury stock can support capital efficiency, a blanket cancellation without a clear strategic framework risks eliminating flexibility unnecessarily. The Company may benefit from retaining treasury shares for future use in acquisitions or incentive plans, particularly in a shifting business environment. Without a detailed rationale or long-term capital plan underpinning the proposal, the scope of the cancellation appears excessive. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

6. Shareholder Resolution: Expansion of Director Restricted Stock Unit Plan

Proponent's argument: The proposal calls for an expanded restricted stock unit plan, allowing up to 800 million yen and 200,000 shares annually for directors. Grants would be performance-based, tied to ROE and TSR, and designed to reach a value equal to three times the director's fixed remuneration over three years if targets are met. The proponent argues that the current level of equity compensation is too low to ensure alignment with shareholder interests. In fiscal year 2023, stock awards were only 14 percent of directors' fixed pay, far below international norms. Without stronger ownership incentives, directors may lack the shareholder perspective needed for long-term value creation. The proposal aims to bring director compensation in line with global standards and ensure that directors are meaningfully invested in the company's success.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, stating that the current remuneration system already includes a balanced mix of fixed, performance-based, and stock-based elements. The existing RSU plan, introduced in 2023, was approved by over 95 percent of shareholders and allocates 15 percent of pay to stock incentives. The proposed expansion would significantly increase total director pay and disrupt the current balance. If implemented, it could result in directors receiving stock awards far in excess of their base salaries, creating an overly performance-heavy structure. The Company also notes that the Nomination and Remuneration Committee, which includes independent directors, already oversees compensation design to ensure objectivity. While the Company is open to evolving its pay framework, it believes changes should be made gradually and within its existing structure. The proposal is therefore not supported.

PIRC analysis: This proposal seeks to significantly expand the restricted stock unit plan for directors, with grants linked to performance metrics such as ROE and TSR. While increasing director shareholding is often presented as a way to align interests with shareholders, such mechanisms can lead to excessive pay outcomes without adequate safeguards. This proposal would materially raise overall director compensation without providing a detailed framework for how performance will be measured or rewarded. In the absence of clear, transparent targets and conditions, and given the potential imbalance introduced into the pay structure, a vote against is recommended.

CENTRAL JAPAN RAILWAY CORP AGM - 25-06-2025

1. Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 16 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 6.7%. which at less than 15%, is below what shareholders could reasonably expect.

2. Shareholders' Proposal: Buybacks

Proponent Shareholder: Name not disclosed

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes a ¥60 billion share repurchase of up to 10 million shares within one year, arguing that the company has failed to meet expectations it set under its Medium-term Business Plan. Although the plan allocated ¥20 billion for repurchases in May 2024, none had been executed as of March 2025. The proponent views this inaction as a breach of market trust, particularly since the plan advertised a 165% total payout ratio combining dividends and buybacks. They further question the viability of large-scale M&A while the company is in a "reboot" phase involving internal restructuring, write-downs, and IT overhauls. Rather than pursuing potentially risky external growth, the shareholder argues that investing in the company's own undervalued stock offers a surer path to value creation. The proposed repurchase would fall within the broader ¥80–100 billion budget already set aside for strategic investments, making it financially feasible and aligned with stated policies.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, stating that it is too rigid and financially aggressive. The proposed buyback totals approximately 2.5 times the company's FY2025/3 net profit, which the Board deems excessive. While the company acknowledges the importance of shareholder returns, it argues that repurchases should remain flexible and responsive to factors like earnings, capital needs, and share price levels. The Board insists that long-term corporate value is better supported by following the capital allocation framework of the Medium-term Plan, which balances shareholder returns with internal and external growth investments. A fixed repurchase commitment could hinder this balance, and the one-year timeline introduces short-term pressures. Accordingly, the Board believes the proposal may undermine the company's strategic priorities and overall shareholder value in the medium to long term.

PIRC Recommendation: While share buybacks can be a useful tool for capital efficiency, the proposed repurchase of ¥60 billion-2.5 times net income-is excessive and overly prescriptive. The company has outlined a capital allocation framework within its Medium-term Plan that already accommodates shareholder returns alongside essential investments and restructuring. Mandating a fixed buyback amount within a one-year window could restrict financial flexibility and interfere with the company's long-term strategic priorities. Given the scale, timing, and lack of responsiveness built into the proposal, opposition is recommended.

1e.. Elect Jen-Hsun Huang - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

Additionally, the articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

5. Shareholders' Proposal: Buybacks

Proponent Shareholder: Name not disclosed

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes a ¥50 billion share buyback, capped at 15 million shares, to be executed within one year, alongside a reserve transfer to retained earnings. The proponent argues the company holds surplus capital, with ¥185.5 billion in financial assets and ¥25.8 billion in idle real estate. Given its debt-free position, stable earnings (average EBITDA over ¥50 billion annually), and business predictability-80% of sales stem from replacement demand-they believe growth investments can be funded from future cash flows. The proposal also notes undervaluation in the company's market metrics, including PBR and EV/EBITDA, compared to global peers. To correct this, they advocate asset sales and buybacks to enhance capital efficiency and per-share value, asserting this will benefit all shareholders and drive long-term value.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. It argues that the proposed buyback-equivalent to 1.7x net income-is excessive and may compromise financial flexibility and growth investments central to the company's strategy. The Corporation has already invested ¥162 billion under its current medium-term plan and plans to invest an additional ¥20 billion in FY2026. The Board also points to strategic use of the previously idle Aoyama property, opening in July 2025 as a brand experience facility. Regarding shareholder returns, the company has exceeded its five-year targets, achieving a total return ratio of 77.3%, including flexible buybacks and rising dividends. The Board stresses that buybacks should align with long-term strategy, performance, and financial position-not rigid shareholder mandates. As such, it considers the proposed action too prescriptive and misaligned with sustainable value creation.

PIRC Recommendation: While capital efficiency is an important consideration, the proposed share buyback is excessive in scale-amounting to 1.7 times the company's net income-and risks undermining the financial stability needed to fund growth investments outlined in the medium-term plan. The company has already returned substantial value to shareholders through dividends and flexible buybacks, with a projected total return ratio of 77.3%, well above targets. In this context, a rigid, large-scale repurchase mandate may constrain strategic flexibility and long-term value creation. Opposition is recommended.

6. Shareholders' Proposal: Approval of compensation amount related to restricted stock compensation system

Proponent Shareholder: Name not disclosed

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes raising the cap on restricted stock compensation to ¥370 million annually and 120,000 shares, significantly increasing alignment between directors and shareholders. They argue current levels of stock-based pay are inadequate-just ¥16 million in FY2024, or 7% of fixed compensation-which would take 44 years to build up to the recommended ownership threshold of three times base pay. The proponent notes that this level of alignment is standard among global peers, particularly in the US and Europe, where directors are often required to accumulate significant holdings within a few years. The proposal would link the increased stock grants to performance indicators like ROE and TSR and would allow for cumulative awards over three years if targets are met. The aim is to accelerate equity ownership among directors and better align incentives with shareholder value.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. It argues that the proposed increase in stock compensation is excessive relative to current performance levels and unnecessary, as directors already have material equity holdings. The company has recently revised its compensation system, shifting the fixed-to-performance-linked ratio from 70:30 to 60:40, and incorporating ROE, TSR, and employee engagement as performance metrics. Stock ownership guidelines have also been introduced, requiring directors to hold shares equal to 1–1.5x base compensation within three years. A Compensation Advisory Committee, chaired by an independent outside director, ensures transparency and appropriateness of pay. The company states that its current governance and incentive structures are already in line with shareholder interests, and its top executives already hold substantial equity positions. Therefore, the Board sees no need to revise the existing framework.

PIRC Recommendation: While increasing director share ownership can strengthen alignment with shareholder interests, the proposed expansion in restricted stock awards is excessive given the company's current performance and recently updated compensation framework. The Corporation has already restructured pay to increase performance linkage, introduced stock ownership guidelines, and embedded relevant KPIs such as ROE and TSR. These reforms reflect a credible commitment to aligning incentives without resorting to overgenerous equity awards. The proposed scale risks weakening the link between pay and sustainable performance. Opposition is recommended.

ABRDN EUROPEAN LOGISTICS INCOME PLC AGM - 25-06-20251. *Receive the Annual Report

The dividend policy was put forward for shareholder's approval, which is welcomed. The company have disclosed a voting policy indicating how they vote on issues relating to investment and investee companies. In addition, it is noted ESG matters are taken into account in investment decisions which is welcomed. Administration and company secretarial duties are undertaken by the Investment Manager of the company. Independence from the management company is considered a key governance issue affecting investment trusts and to ensure that the management company is not used as a conduit for shareholder communication with the board. Additionally, While a Key Information Document (KID) is disclosed for the year under review, the disclosure of the breakdown of costs is considered inadequate, and while it is understood that the previous cost disclosure rules under the PRIIPs Regulation are no longer required by the FCA for Investment Trusts, the omission of this breakdown at this time is considered contrary to best practise. However, where administrative duties are carried out by the company related to the manager, opposition is recommended.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 40%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee would bear accountability for this shortfall, however, in the absence of a Chair of the Committee facing re-election, responsibility for this matter instead falls to the Chair of the Board. Additionally, While a Key Information Document (KID) is disclosed for the year under review, the disclosure of the breakdown of costs is considered inadequate, and while it is understood that the previous cost disclosure rules under the PRIIPs Regulation are no longer required by the FCA for Investment Trusts, the omission of this breakdown at this time is considered contrary to best practise. Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

9. Shareholders' Proposal: Dismissal of Director

Proponent Shareholder: A shareholder coalition led by two unnamed shareholders

Proponent's argument: The shareholders seek to dismiss Director Yoshihisa Kitano, criticizing his decision to issue shares to fund capital investments aimed at reducing CO2 emissions. They argue this increased the company's financial burden and excluded Japanese nationals from subscribing, harming shareholder value and the national interest. They question the science behind CO and climate change and suggest alternative, lower-burden funding methods like using retained earnings or domestic loans. They accuse Mr. Kitano of making reckless financial decisions and betraying shareholder and national interests.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. It defends Mr. Kitano's leadership and climate-related investments, stating these support long-term growth and align with TCFD principles. It explains that the share issuance was needed to finance strategic initiatives like steel production upgrades and to diversify the shareholder base. Mr. Kitano is credited with driving reforms, growth strategies, and responsible governance. The Board sees no grounds for his dismissal and supports his continued service.

PIRC Recommendation: While shareholders have the right to hold directors accountable, this proposal lacks a sound basis for the dismissal of Mr. Kitano. The criticisms levelled against him are grounded in a rejection of climate science and a narrow view of capital allocation, rather than evidence of misconduct, poor performance, or failure to act in shareholders' best interests. The company has articulated a clear strategy aligned with internationally recognised climate frameworks (TCFD) and justified its financing decisions as necessary for long-term growth. Mr. Kitano appears to have executed his duties lawfully and in support of the company's strategic objectives. Arbitrary removal would undermine board stability and strategic continuity. Opposition is recommended.

1h.. Elect Paul S. Pressler - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee. The Chair is not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

In terms of best practice, it is considered that Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

ACCIONA SA AGM - 25-06-2025

1.3. Approval and discharge, if applicable, of the corporate management and actions of the administrative body of Acciona, S.A. for the 2024 financial year

Standard proposal.

Acciona faces allegations of having facilitated €620,000 in bribes to secure public contracts, in events that took place between 2018 and 2021 under the board's oversight. The involvement of a former executive and the scale of the contracts obtained point to serious failures in internal controls and ethical supervision. While the company has launched an internal investigation, its response has been reactive and does not address the lack of preventive diligence. Therefore, it is appropriate to oppose the discharge of the board for its responsibility in these governance failures.

1.6. Re-election of KPMG as the auditor for financial year 2025

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 76.44% of audit fees during the year under review and 69.77% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3. Approval of the Directors' Remuneration Policy for the Financial Years 2026, 2027 and 2028

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy with a binding vote. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration and absence of fully quantified targets.

Vote Cast: Oppose

4. Advisory Vote on the Annual Directors' Remuneration Report for 2024

It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

STAR ENTERTAINMENT GROUP EGM - 25-06-2025

1. Approve Private Placement and Potential Acquisition of Control by Bally's Corporation

Introduction & Background: On 7 April 2025, The Star entered into a term sheet with Bally's Corporation for a strategic investment involving convertible notes and subordinated debt, aimed at raising critical funding to support its financial recovery and business continuity. This resolution allows Bally's to convert notes into shares which could result in it holding up to 53.75% of the issued share capital in The Star, subject to shareholder and regulatory approvals.

Proposal: Shareholders are being asked to approve the acquisition by Bally's (or its nominee) of up to 53.75% of The Star's shares via the conversion of convertible notes, as well as approve the issue of those convertible notes, as detailed in the Explanatory Memorandum.

Rationale: The Board considers the investment by Bally's to be essential for addressing The Star's ongoing liquidity challenges and mitigating the risk of insolvency. The capital injection of up to AUD 200 million from Bally's is expected to provide stability, preserve value for shareholders, and enable the release of AUD 58 million held in escrow from a prior asset sale. The Independent Expert concluded that the transaction is "reasonable" for non-associated shareholders.

Recommendation: The Board seeks authority to approve a private placement of convertible notes to Bally's Corporation without offering pre-emptive rights. If fully converted, the notes would give Bally's up to 53.75% of the Company's issued share capital, resulting in significant dilution for existing shareholders. As the authorisation permits issuance well beyond 10% of share capital and entails an effective transfer of control without shareholder participation, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Approve Private Placement and Shareholding Increase by Investment Holdings

Introduction & Background: Following Bally's investment, The Star received a commitment from its largest shareholder, Investment Holdings, on 8 April 2025 to co-invest up to AUD 100 million on similar terms. This resolution seeks shareholder approval to allow Investment Holdings to increase its Relevant Interest to 37.33% through convertible note conversion.

Proposal: Shareholders are asked to approve the acquisition of up to 37.33% of The Star's shares by Investment Holdings via the conversion of convertible notes, and to approve the issue of these notes in line with applicable corporate and listing rules.

Rationale: The Board believes that Investment Holdings' participation provides critical funding and demonstrates strong support from the existing major shareholder. Together with Bally's, this co-investment forms a coordinated AUD 300 million capital package. The Board views this as a pragmatic solution to preserve shareholder value amid significant legal and financial headwinds, including ongoing regulatory issues and litigation exposure.

Rationale: The Board seeks authority to approve a private placement of convertible notes to Investment Holdings Pty Ltd, without offering pre-emptive rights to existing shareholders. If fully converted, these notes would increase Investment Holdings' stake to up to 37.33% of the Company's issued share capital, resulting in considerable dilution for other shareholders. As this authorisation allows a substantial issue of capital without broader shareholder participation, and facilitates a potential concentration of control, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3a. Ratification of Private Placement of Convertible Notes to Bally's Corporation

Introduction & Background: On 11 April 2025, The Star issued 278,517,860 Tranche 1A Convertible Notes to Bally's, representing approximately 9.71% of the Company's pre-issue share capital, raising AUD 22.3 million. This issuance was conducted within existing placement capacity limits and now seeks formal shareholder ratification.

Proposal: Shareholders are asked to approve and ratify the prior allotment and issue of 278,517,860 Tranche 1A Convertible Notes to Bally's in accordance with ASX Listing Rule 7.4.

Rationale: Ratifying this allotment ensures the placement does not affect the Company's future capacity to issue equity under ASX Listing Rule 7.1. The funding was part of the initial tranche to immediately support liquidity needs while broader investment approvals were being sought.

Rationale: The Board seeks shareholder ratification for the prior issue of 278,517,860 Tranche 1A Convertible Notes to Bally's Corporation under ASX Listing Rule 7.4. While the issuance was conducted under existing placement capacity, ratifying it would refresh the Company's ability to issue further capital without shareholder approval. The convertible notes were allocated via private placement without pre-emptive rights, resulting in a potential 9.71% dilution. As this issuance forms part of a broader transaction that may lead to a transfer of control and was undertaken without prior shareholder input, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3b. Ratification of Private Placement of Convertible Notes to Investment Holdings

Introduction & Background: Concurrent with the Bally's issuance, 139,258,930 Tranche 1B Convertible Notes were issued to Investment Holdings on 11 April 2025, raising AUD 11.1 million and representing 4.85% of the Company's pre-issue share capital. This resolution seeks shareholder ratification of that issuance.

Proposal: Shareholders are asked to approve and ratify the prior issue of 139,258,930 Tranche 1B Convertible Notes to Investment Holdings under ASX Listing Rule 7.4.

Rationale: Ratification of this issuance helps preserve the Company's future flexibility under ASX Listing Rule 7.1 by ensuring the prior allocation of notes does not count against its placement capacity. The funding received from Investment Holdings was considered critical to support the Company's short-term liquidity needs during a period of significant financial pressure. The Board believes that formal shareholder ratification reinforces transparency and enables the Company to maintain access to equity markets should further capital raising be required.

Rationale: The Board seeks shareholder ratification for the prior issue of 139,258,930 Tranche 1B Convertible Notes to Investment Holdings Pty Ltd under ASX Listing Rule 7.4. Although this issuance was made under existing placement capacity, ratifying it would refresh the Company's ability to issue further capital without shareholder approval. The transaction was executed as a private placement without offering pre-emptive rights to existing shareholders, resulting in a dilution of their interests. As this issuance forms part of a broader transaction that may lead to a transfer of control and was undertaken without prior shareholder input, opposition is recommended.

4. Shareholders' Proposal: Amend Articles

Proponent Shareholder: Name not disclosed

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes amending the Articles of Incorporation to require the company to dissolve its capital and business alliance with Suruga Bank, citing significant reputational and governance risks. Suruga Bank has been under a business improvement order by Japan's Financial Services Agency (FSA) for over six years due to widespread fraudulent lending practices. The proponent argues that the bank's ongoing litigation with affected borrowers, failure to adequately resolve past misconduct, and reports of internal harassment reflect systemic governance failures. Continued association with Suruga Bank, they claim, exposes the company to reputational harm and future legal or regulatory risks. Given growing political scrutiny and social backlash against Suruga Bank, the proponent asserts that sound corporate governance and risk management should outweigh any short-term benefits of the alliance. They urge the company to prioritise integrity and stakeholder trust by formally severing the partnership through an amendment to its foundational governance documents.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal. It maintains that the company has had no involvement in Suruga Bank's lending issues or the FSA's business improvement order and sees no evidence that the alliance has harmed the company's reputation or increased its risk profile. The Board asserts that the alliance supports long-term value creation and that there is no justification for terminating it based on another entity's past issues. Furthermore, the Board argues that it is inappropriate to use the Articles of Incorporation to govern specific operational decisions such as business alliances. These are matters for executive management, not constitutional provisions. Accordingly, the Board concludes that the proposed amendment is both structurally inappropriate and strategically unfounded.

PIRC Recommendation: While the underlying concerns about Suruga Bank's governance issues and ongoing regulatory scrutiny are valid, prescribing the dissolution of a specific business alliance through an amendment to the Articles of Incorporation is not an appropriate use of the company's constitutional framework. The Articles are intended to establish fundamental governance structures, not to dictate specific business relationships. Embedding such operational matters would constrain board discretion and set an unworkable precedent. Strategic decisions regarding partnerships should remain within the purview of the Board. Opposition is recommended.

has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Although this is a common practice for a standard item in this market, support will not be suggested for resolutions concerning remuneration when sufficient information has not been made available for shareholders in sufficient time prior to the meeting, as such practice prevents shareholders from reaching an informed decision. 17. Shareholders' Proposal: Termination of Advertising by the Company

Proponent Shareholder: A single individual shareholder.

Proponent's argument: This resolution proposes that the company halt all advertising activities. The proponent argues that corporate advertising, especially in the context of a regulated utility monopoly, does not serve a competitive purpose and primarily functions as image management. They contend that such expenditures amount to an inappropriate use of ratepayer funds and serve no essential business need. The resolution also questions the ethical implications of using advertising to shape public opinion on controversial matters such as nuclear energy, suggesting that funds would be better allocated toward safety or environmental initiatives.

Company's response: The company opposes the resolution, stating that advertising is a legitimate tool for promoting understanding of its services, energy-saving programs, and sustainability efforts. It maintains that public communication supports customer engagement and transparency, and that spending is subject to internal controls. The company argues that advertising plays a role in public education, and that restricting it through the Articles of Incorporation would reduce flexibility and limit its ability to engage effectively with the public.

PIRC recommendation: PIRC opposes this resolution. While advertising by regulated utilities should be restrained and transparent, a blanket prohibition would undermine the company's ability to communicate essential information to the public. Oversight, not elimination, is the more appropriate remedy.

Vote Cast: Oppose

19. Shareholders' Proposal: Cancellation of Employee Shareholding Association Incentives

Proponent Shareholder: A single individual shareholder.

Proponent's argument: This resolution seeks to eliminate the company's incentive payments to the employee shareholding association, arguing that these payments amount to indirect compensation unrelated to job performance. The proponent contends that subsidising employee stock purchases with corporate funds distorts ownership structure and introduces a conflict of interest, especially in governance matters where employees act as shareholders. The resolution asserts that any incentive scheme not tied to transparent performance metrics should be discontinued to preserve fairness and alignment between shareholders and management.

Company's response: The company opposes the resolution, arguing that encouraging employee share ownership promotes motivation, alignment with company performance, and medium-to-long-term value creation. It states that the incentive system is standard practice and that all arrangements comply with regulatory and disclosure requirements. The company believes the program supports a strong corporate culture and that modifying such internal policies via the Articles of Incorporation would be inappropriate.

PIRC recommendation: PIRC opposes this resolution. Employee shareholding schemes, when appropriately structured, help align workforce interests with long-term corporate success. Eliminating such incentives could undermine morale and disengage employees from the company's performance trajectory.

1. Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 30 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 13.8%. which at less than 15%, is below what shareholders could reasonably expect.

3.1. Shareholder Resolution: Appoint Ken Mohan as a Director

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes electing Ken Mohan as an Outside Director to address key challenges faced by the company, particularly in improving capital efficiency, insurance business profitability, and group governance. Mr. Mohan brings extensive experience in M&A, business management, and insurance strategy, having held senior roles at MetLife, Inc. across Asia and the U.S., including strategy, product design, digital transformation, and risk mitigation. The proponent argues that the company has failed to reform outdated management policies despite 20 years of group integration and continues to struggle with low capital efficiency, high lapse rates, underperforming overseas investments, and governance structures prone to "self-supervision." Appointing Mr. Mohan would fill the current gap in insurance expertise among Outside Directors, support revising sales and product strategies, and strengthen independent oversight of management. His experience is seen as vital to advancing reforms free from internal constraints and enabling bold, timely decisions to elevate the company's valuation and governance practices in line with international standards.

Company's response: The company opposes the shareholder proposal, asserting that the current Board composition already offers the necessary expertise and has delivered steady progress under its Long-Term Vision. It highlights achievements in Group adjusted profit and ROE, enhanced shareholder returns through dividends and buybacks, and advances in governance reforms such as strengthened nomination, compensation processes, and ALM-based risk reduction. The Board claims Mr. Mohan's experience, while valuable, overlaps with existing directors' capabilities in areas like global management and capital efficiency. The Nomination and Compensation Committee conducted interviews but concluded that Mr. Mohan lacks sufficient familiarity with the group's vision and business, and has no prior experience as a director of a listed company. They argue his appointment would displace existing candidates with proven track records, upsetting the board's diversity and strategic continuity. Moreover, the company defends current governance structures, including cross-directorships between the parent and subsidiaries, as vital for coherent group-wide strategy implementation. It concludes that appointing Mr. Mohan would not enhance long-term corporate value and recommends a vote against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: This proposal seeks the election of Mr. Ken Mohan as an Outside Director, based on his extensive executive experience in the insurance sector, including senior roles at MetLife across Asia and the U.S. The proponent highlights his background in strategic planning, digital transformation, and capital management as relevant to the company's long-term challenges. However, Mr. Mohan has not previously served on the board of a listed company. While executive experience can offer valuable perspectives, board service requires a different set of competencies, including familiarity with governance processes, collective decision-making, and oversight responsibilities. The company has indicated that Mr. Mohan did not demonstrate sufficient understanding of its long-term strategy during the nomination process and expressed concern about his preparedness for the role. In view of the absence of prior board experience and the company's assertion that similar skills already exist within the current board composition, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3.2. Shareholder Resolution: Appoint Ina Kegler as a Director

Proponent's argument: The proponent seeks the appointment of Ina Kegler as an Outside Director, citing her extensive experience in the European insurance and reinsurance industries, particularly through senior roles at Allianz Group. Ms. Kegler has served as CFO and CIO in various entities within Allianz, with responsibility for IFRS 17 implementation, Solvency II compliance, asset-liability matching, and financial governance. The proponent argues that the company has not effectively reformed its legacy group structure or enhanced capital efficiency to a level comparable with global peers. It identifies weaknesses in profitability, risk management, and governance, asserting that no current Outside Directors possess deep insurance expertise. Ms. Kegler's experience in risk-based finance, reinsurance strategy, and compliance is positioned as directly relevant to the company's evolving needs. Her multilingual and cross-cultural competencies, including fluency in Japanese and experience in Japan, are seen as assets for international alignment. The shareholder contends that electing directors with domain-specific experience and independence from group legacy dynamics is essential to support governance reform, profitability enhancement, and credible oversight of capital and risk strategy.

Company's response: The company recommends voting against the proposal. It acknowledges Ms. Kegler's finance and compliance experience within the reinsurance industry, including her role at Allianz Re, but states that her expertise is already represented within the current board composition. It further notes that Ms. Kegler lacks direct experience with the Japanese domestic life insurance sector, which is central to the group's operations. The Board expresses concern over her limited familiarity with the company's business and long-term strategy, and notes that she has not previously served on the board of a listed company. While the Nomination and Compensation Committee conducted interviews, it concluded that her appointment would not add distinct value over existing members, and might displace directors with more relevant knowledge and continuity. The Board also argues that its structured nomination process, governance reforms, and enhanced oversight frameworks have already yielded measurable performance improvements. It concludes that the current Board is well-equipped to manage capital allocation and strategy, and recommends that shareholders vote against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: The proposal seeks to appoint Ms. Ina Kegler, citing her senior leadership experience in finance and compliance roles within the European insurance and reinsurance sectors. While her expertise in areas such as Solvency II, IFRS 17, and asset-liability management may be relevant to the company's evolving needs, she has not previously served on the board of a listed company and lacks direct experience in the Japanese life insurance market, which is central to the group's operations. The company has stated that similar skills are already present on the board and raised concerns about her limited familiarity with its strategy. In the absence of clear evidence that the candidate would add distinct value at board level, an oppose vote is recommended.

ALLEGRO.EU SOCIETE ANONYME AGM - 26-06-2025

6. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

Vote Cast: Oppose

14. Discharge Nancy Cruickshank

Standard proposal.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

22. Re-elect Tomasz Suchański - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director and Member of the Remuneration Committee. It is considered that the members of the remuneration committee are responsible for the company's remuneration report, and owing to concerns with the company's remuneration report, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

24. Discharge the Auditors

Discharge of auditor is not compulsory in this market and is not included in or recommended by the local corporate governance code (the Ten Principles). Auditors discharge may prevent lawsuits or claims for activities carried out during the year relating to facts that have not been disclosed to shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

25. Appoint the Auditors

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 45.47% of audit fees during the year under review and 24.86% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

Vote Cast: Abstain

28. Approve Fees Payable to the Board of Directors

It is proposed to increase the amount payable to the Board of Directors by more than 10% per director on annual basis. The increase is considered material and exceeds guidelines, while the company has not duly justified it. Therefore, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

LAMDA DEVELOPMENT SA AGM - 26-06-2025

2. Approval of the overall management of the Company in accordance with article 108 of Law 4548/2018, as in force, and exemption of the Company's Statutory Auditors from any liability for compensation for the fiscal year 2024.

In this market, auditors discharge may prevent lawsuits or claims for activities carried out during the year relating to facts that have not been disclosed to shareholders. As a consequence, releasing auditors from liability will weaken the governance framework and introduce great risks for investors. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3. Election of an audit firm of Statutory Auditors Accountants for the audit of the annual and interim, and consolidated financial statements, the limited assurance on the Sustainability Report (CSRD), the audit for the issuance of the annual tax certificate, and the execution of audits based on agreed upon procedures for the fiscal year of 2025 and determination of their fees.

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 61.65% of audit fees during the year under review and 63.72% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. Therefore, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

4. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. The Company has disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for the entirety of its variable remuneration component. On balance, opposition is recommended based on excessiveness concerns.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9. Authorise Share Repurchase

The Share Buyback authority is limited to 10% of the company's share capital, but it exceeds the 18-month duration. While the percentage limit is within acceptable bounds, the extended time frame raises concerns about long-term shareholder value and potential market impact. This extended period could lead to excessive buybacks beyond the intended scope, which is not in line with standard practices. Given the duration exceeds the typical 18-month limit, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

8. Granting of authorisation pursuant to article 98 par. 1 of Law 4548/ 2018 to the members of the Board of Directors and the Managers to participate to Boards of Directors or/and the management of other companies.

Approval is sought for directors to serve on the board of other companies engaged in activities within the scope of the company's business. There are concerns over the risks and potential negative impact on shareholders interest connected to directors or other officers of the Company serving for competing companies. In addition, there is insufficient description on how the Company will take measure to monitor the conflicts of interest and prevent any negative effect for the Company and ultimately its shareholders. Therefore, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

11. Approval of the updated "Restricted Stock Units" free share offering scheme.

The Board proposes the approval of the updated Restricted Shares Plan incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options/rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after a period of time from the date of award. The Company does not disclose clear performance criteria but only a list of indicators, which makes it impossible to assess clearly the link between pay and performance and is deemed a serious frustration of shareholder accountability. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

10.6. Elect Mr. Ioannis Zafiriou - Senior Independent Director

Senior Independent Director Chair of the Nomination & Remuneration Committees. Considered independent.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. Furthermore, it is considered that the Chair of the Remuneration Committee is responsible for the company's remuneration policy, and owing to concerns with the company's remuneration policy, opposition is recommended.

TOYO SUISAN KAISHA LTD AGM - 26-06-2025

5. Shareholder Resolution: Purchase of Treasury Shares

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests that the company purchase up to 20 million of its own shares for a total cost of up to 150 billion yen within one year of the shareholder meeting. This proposal is grounded in the belief that the company has an optimal capital structure opportunity based on excess cash and investment securities held on its balance sheet. As of December 31, 2024, the company had roughly 248 billion yen in cash and deposits, and 36 billion yen in investment securities, which the proponent believes are underutilized. While the company has committed to limiting cash growth, the proponent argues that current investment plans are already sufficiently funded by operating cash flows, leaving surplus funds that could be better employed to improve capital efficiency. The proposal aligns with the company's own historical ROIC performance (over 15%) and suggests the company can promptly achieve its 15% ROE target by adopting an appropriate capital structure. Therefore, the proponent sees the treasury share purchase as a practical and timely measure to address capital efficiency concerns and strengthen shareholder value.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal. It asserts that its Corporate Governance Guidelines already support the use of both dividends and treasury share purchases to return value to shareholders, but within a context that also strengthens equity and supports future investments. The company emphasizes its long-term stability in dividend payouts, with a payout ratio exceeding 22% even during crises, and notes that the recent medium-term plan (FY2022–FY2024) achieved over 30%. Under the new medium-term plan (FY2025–FY2027), the company aims to further increase capital investment and enhance shareholder returns, targeting a 70% total return ratio through both dividends and share buybacks. The board argues that the shareholder proposal overlooks this balanced capital allocation strategy, especially the need for financial resilience to support long-term value creation. It also states that accepting the proposal would disregard the company's established governance policies and strategic capital deployment plans. Consequently, the board recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the proponent, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

6.2. Shareholder Resolution: Employment Issues

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes Mr. Masami Kashiwakura as an Outside Director to strengthen the Company's global growth and portfolio oversight. The proponent argues that the Board is inadequately structured to address strategic capital inefficiencies and persistently low returns from non-core segments, with chronic ROIC under 4%. The recently announced Medium Term Management Plan fails to tackle these long-standing issues. Mr. Kashiwakura brings extensive experience from Ajinomoto Co., Inc., having led businesses across Japan, North America, and Europe. His insights align closely with the Company's international instant noodle segment, its primary growth driver. The proposal criticises the current Board for its lack of diversity in skill and its tolerance of passive capital accumulation ¥244 billion in cash without a clear utilisation policy. It also flags structural governance concerns, including the ongoing representative authority of two retired presidents, which allegedly stifles internal reform. Mr. Kashiwakura's appointment is seen as vital to recalibrating the Board's focus and implementing value enhancing strategies under President Sumimoto's leadership.

Company's response: The Board rejects Mr. Kashiwakura's nomination, reaffirming confidence in the current director slate. It highlights past achievements, including surpassing targets in the prior Medium-Term Management Plan and initiating robust governance upgrades in the new plan. The Board asserts that the existing Nomination and Remuneration Committee, composed primarily of Outside Directors, has exercised due diligence and supports the current nominees. While recognising Mr. Kashiwakura's food industry credentials, the Company identifies a potential risk due to his executive background with Ajinomoto, a strategic joint venture partner. The Company fears this may constrain future collaboration. It also denies the proponent's claim that governance structures, such as the role of former presidents hinder reform, pointing instead to concrete actions already taken, such as treasury share repurchases and governance streamlining under President Sumimoto. The Board dismisses the proposal as speculative, misleading, and unsupported by specific governance failings, reiterating that its own candidates are best suited to drive long-term value.

Company's response: While Mr. Kashiwakura offers relevant experience in the global food sector, his recent senior role at Ajinomoto Co., Inc., a strategic partner engaged in multiple joint ventures with the Company raises legitimate independence concerns. The proximity of his tenure may create a perception of limited objectivity in matters involving that partner. In the absence of a clear need to appoint a director with such close ties to a major business counterparty, and given that the company already has insufficient board independence, opposition is recommended.

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 45 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 139.3%. which at more than 100% payout, is considered unwise given the capital maintenance needs of the company.

1g.. Elect Ronald L. Sargent - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

COSTAR GROUP INC AGM - 26-06-2025

1a.. Elect Louise S. Sams - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board. Additionally, At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure

Furthermore, as the Company does not have a board elected committee in charge of their sustainability policies, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

2.. Appoint the Auditors: EY

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.31% of audit fees during the year under review and 2.48% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Vote Cast: Oppose

The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 26:1

Rating: AD. Based on the rating an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

8. Re-elect Mr. David Hutchison - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Furthermore, it is considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

Non-executive Director and Member of the Nomination Committee. Not considered to be independent as he is the co-founder, significant shareholder and former CEO & Managing Director of the Company. An oppose vote is therefore recommended.

12. Adoption of the Remuneration Policy with respect to the Managing Board

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy with a binding vote. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration and absence of quantified targets.

Vote Cast: Oppose

14. Authorization of the Managing Board, until December 26, 2026, to acquire shares in the Company's own share capital

It is proposed to renew the authorisation for the Managing Board to repurchase up to 10% of QIAGEN's issued share capital until December 26, 2026. Repurchases may occur on a stock exchange or otherwise, at prices ranging from EUR 0.01 to 110% of the higher average closing price on the NYSE or Frankfurt Stock Exchange for ordinary shares, or up to three times the issuance price for preference shares.

The Share Buyback proposal is conducted at a price greater than a 5% premium to the prevailing market price. We consider this to be an excessive premium that may not represent a prudent use of shareholder capital. Paying significantly above market value for shares can result in an inefficient allocation of resources and may not deliver value to long-term shareholders. In our view, capital would be better deployed elsewhere in the business or returned through more equitable means. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

15. Discretionary Capital Repayment via Synthetic Share Repurchase

This resolution authorises the Managing Board, with Supervisory Board approval, to implement a capital repayment of up to USD 500 million through a synthetic share repurchase. This process involves amending the Articles of Association in three steps: increasing the par value of ordinary shares, consolidating shares via a reverse stock split, and subsequently reducing the par value back to EUR 0.01 to facilitate the cash repayment to shareholders.

When considered in addition to the share buyback authorisation under Resolution 14, the proposed USD 500 million capital repayment under Resolution 15 would exceed the 10% threshold of the company's issued share capital. As such opposition is recommended.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Remove Comma from Company Name

Proponent's argument: The proposal seeks to amend Article 1 of the Articles of Incorporation to remove the comma from the company name, changing it from "Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group, Inc." to "Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group Inc." The proponent argues that the comma is unnecessary, unusual, and creates the potential for misinterpretation. Among 34 Japanese bank holding companies, MUFG is the only one that uses the term "Financial Group," and uniquely applies a comma in its name. The proponent suggests that the use of punctuation appears outdated and pretentious, particularly in light of recent reputational issues at MUFG subsidiaries, including incidents involving asset theft and regulatory sanctions. Furthermore, the comma complicates usage in financial publications and international documentation, often resulting in redundant or inconsistent representations such as "FinancialGroup." The proponent asserts that the proposed change would simplify the brand, reduce confusion, and reflect a focus on substance rather than form. The timing is proposed to coincide with the completion of the Company's new headquarters.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. MUFG states that its current name was adopted in 2005 following shareholder approval of the merger with UFJ Holdings, Inc., and has since served as the official and recognised identity of the Group. The Company argues that a name change after nearly two decades would offer no material benefit to shareholders and could potentially lead to confusion or administrative burden. It further states that the proposed alteration does not contribute to long-term corporate value or align with the common interests of shareholders. The Board concludes that there is no compelling rationale to justify the change and considers the proposal unnecessary.

PIRC analysis: Changes to the Articles of Incorporation should be reserved for matters of strategic, governance, or structural significance. The proposed amendment to remove the comma from the company name does not present a material benefit to shareholders or address a substantive governance concern. While consistency in naming conventions is desirable, the case for this change is not compelling and could lead to unnecessary administrative costs and confusion. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

7. Shareholder Resolution: Mandate Code of Conduct for Officers and Employees

Proponent's argument: The proposal seeks to add a new chapter and article to the Articles of Incorporation mandating that all officers and employees adhere to laws and social manners to the fullest extent. The proponent links this to a pattern of misconduct observed in the prior fiscal year at MUFG's subsidiary bank and securities firm. Drawing on the "broken windows theory," the proposal argues that minor breaches of ethics, if tolerated, may escalate into major violations. It suggests that fostering a culture of discipline and etiquette-even in matters not governed by law is critical to maintaining integrity. As a symbolic example, the proponent references Japanese escalator etiquette and a specific MUFG sponsored infrastructure project that promotes behavioral conformity. The proposal emphasises the reputational importance of ethical leadership in both regulated and unregulated spaces, and urges the Company to codify this high standard of conduct within its Articles as a formal commitment to shareholders and society.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. MUFG states that it has already established a Group-wide Code of Conduct under the MUFG Way, which serves as the ethical foundation for all officers and employees. This includes adherence to laws and acting according to high ethical standards. The Company argues that codifying such behavioural expectations in the Articles of Incorporation is inappropriate, as the Articles are intended to define structural and governance fundamentals-not operational or policy specifics. The Board believes that its current framework adequately governs employee conduct, and that incorporating additional detail into the Articles could dilute their purpose. It concludes that the proposal does not provide a material benefit and is therefore unnecessary.

PIRC analysis: While high standards of conduct are essential, the inclusion of a broad behavioural clause in the Articles of Incorporation is not considered necessary. The Company already maintains a Group-wide Code of Conduct, and the Articles are not the appropriate vehicle for operational policy. Moreover, personal behaviour in day-to-day scenarios particularly outside regulated business contexts cannot be meaningfully enforced by the Board. The proposal risks codifying general expectations that are better addressed through internal governance and training. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

8. Shareholder Resolution: Authorize Conditional Share Buyback Triggered by Nikkei 225 Decline

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests that the Company conduct a discretionary share buyback of up to 200 million shares (JPY 300 billion) if the Nikkei 225 falls by more than 2% in the morning session, triggering purchases during the afternoon session on the same day. The aim is to improve capital efficiency by acquiring shares during periods of market weakness, rather than pursuing dollar-cost averaging or fixed daily repurchases, which the proponent argues are suboptimal. The proposal stems from frustration that the Company missed favorable buyback opportunities, such as during the August 2024 market decline and sometimes conducts buybacks when prices are high, diminishing value for long-term shareholders. The proponent contends that the trigger based approach ensures purchases are aligned with market valuation, avoids price speculation linked to MUFG's own stock, and complies with regulatory guidelines. It asserts that this structured, value-driven approach would enhance shareholder returns and reflect sound capital allocation discipline.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. MUFG explains that treasury stock acquisitions are a strategic capital allocation tool determined by the Board in accordance with Article 44 of its Articles of Incorporation and Article 459 of the Companies Act. Decisions are based on performance, capital adequacy, growth investment plans, and prevailing market conditions, including share price levels. MUFG believes this holistic approach supports capital discipline and shareholder value. The Company argues that pre-setting specific purchase conditions, such as index-linked price triggers and fixed trading windows, would impair operational flexibility and responsiveness. Such restrictions could limit the Board's ability to act in shareholders' best interests across varying market environments. The Company emphasises that it already provides transparent disclosures around buyback decisions, and sees no benefit in ceding timing control to pre-set conditions that may not align with long-term value creation goals.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the proposed trigger-based buyback mechanism would benefit long-term shareholders. While the intention to enhance capital efficiency is noted, the proposal lacks sufficient justification as to why pre-setting repurchase conditions based on short-term market movements would be superior to Board discretion. A rigid formula could reduce flexibility and may not align with broader capital management priorities. Opposition is recommended.

9.1. Shareholder Resolution: Election of Outside Director Takafumi Horie

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes the election of Takafumi Horie as an outside director. Mr. Horie, born October 29, 1972, is an entrepreneur and has previously served as CEO of Livedoor and Aisys. He is currently Chairman of CROSS FM Co., Ltd. The proponent states that Mr. Horie brings extensive experience, knowledge, insight, and foresight, which they believe would contribute to the overall development of the Group. His background in founding and managing businesses is seen as an asset, offering a perspective that could support strategic innovation and enhance board diversity.

Company's response: The Board of Directors is opposed to the election of Mr. Horie. The company states that it aims to maintain an effective and well-balanced Board with expertise in areas such as finance, risk management, compliance, and the Group's business. MUFG's Nominating and Governance Committee applies defined selection criteria to nominate director candidates it considers most appropriate for supporting sustainable growth and enhancing long-term corporate value. The Board believes that the nominees proposed under the company's own agenda meet these requirements and that this additional nomination is not necessary.

PIRC analysis: While Takafumi Horie may bring diverse perspectives, the proponent has not provided clear evidence that he possesses the relevant expertise or experience to fulfil fiduciary duties in areas such as financial oversight, compliance, or risk management. The case for the appointment is not compelling, and the format of the proposal limits transparency. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9.3. Shareholder Resolution: Election of Outside Director Yuta Misaki

Proponent's argument: The proposal recommends the election of Yuta Misaki as an outside director. Mr. Misaki, born March 29, 1989, is CEO of Misaki Holdings and is known for his public role as the "Aojiru Prince." The proponent highlights Mr. Misaki's entrepreneurial activity, management of multiple businesses, and involvement in social and youth engagement initiatives. It is argued that his election could bring generational diversity to the Board and help inject new perspectives, potentially addressing concerns about inertia or limited innovation in governance structures.

Company's response: The Board of Directors is opposed to the election of Mr. Misaki. MUFG states that its Board composition is developed through a nomination process that focuses on qualifications relevant to governance, risk oversight, and long-term corporate strategy. The Nominating and Governance Committee assesses candidates based on defined criteria, and the company believes that its proposed nominees are best suited to fulfill the responsibilities of the Board. As a result, MUFG considers the additional nomination unnecessary.

PIRC analysis: While Yuta Misaki may contribute generational diversity and social engagement perspectives, the proposal lacks sufficient detail on his qualifications relevant to financial governance, regulatory oversight, or board effectiveness. In the absence of demonstrated board experience, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9.2. Shareholder Resolution: Election of Outside Director Takashi Tachibana

Proponent's argument: This proposal seeks the election of Takashi Tachibana as an outside director. Mr. Tachibana, born August 15, 1967, is a former member of the House of Councillors and currently CEO of Tachibana Takashi Hitori Broadcasting Co., Ltd. The proponent highlights his unconventional and flexible approach to thinking, noting that it is distinct from other candidates and could offer a new dimension to board discussions. The proposal also refers to incidents at subsidiary companies in the previous fiscal year and suggests that Mr. Tachibana's perspective may strengthen oversight and contribute to improved reliability within the Group.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the election of Mr. Tachibana. MUFG emphasizes that its director nominations are based on a comprehensive assessment by the Nominating and Governance Committee, which considers a candidate's ability to contribute to governance, oversight, and long-term corporate value. The company states that the candidates nominated in its own proposal have been selected to ensure an appropriate balance of skills and experience. Based on this, the Board does not consider the additional nomination necessary.

PIRC analysis: While Takashi Tachibana has public sector experience and may offer an unconventional viewpoint, the proposal does not demonstrate how his skills align with the governance needs of a listed financial institution. There is insufficient clarity on his suitability for board-level oversight responsibilities. Opposition is recommended.

CASIO COMPUTER CO LTD AGM - 27-06-20251. *Approve Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 22.5 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 127.8%, which at more than 100% payout, is considered unwise given the capital maintenance needs of the company.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Election as Outside Director

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes the election of Mr. Atsuhiko Kinoshita as an Outside Director, citing the need for enhanced expertise in competitive strategy, technology, and capital markets to support ongoing business portfolio reforms. The company's recent strategic pivot toward the electronics business is welcomed, and Mr. Kinoshita is presented as uniquely qualified due to his dual background in semiconductor engineering and equity analysis. His experience at Toshiba, Stanford, and as a sell-side analyst equips him with insights into both technological innovation and investor communication. The proponent emphasises his independence from the nominating shareholder and argues that his addition to the board would strengthen its independence, diversity, and decision-making quality, ultimately benefiting long-term corporate value and stakeholder interests.

Company's response: The company opposes the shareholder's proposal. It maintains that its existing governance structure, including an Advisory Committee comprised solely of independent Outside Directors, provides a rigorous and compliant process for director nominations. The company is executing a robust Medium-term Management Plan with strong financial performance and increased shareholder returns, and it believes maintaining the current board structure is vital for its final year of execution. Instead, the company nominates Ms. Mika Kumahira, citing her experience in human capital, entrepreneurship, and governance as better aligned with strategic needs. Following its due process, the Advisory Committee concluded that Mr. Kinoshita lacks sufficient experience in corporate management or board-level responsibilities. The company asserts that it already has adequate technical and investor expertise on the board and in its operations, and Mr. Kinoshita does not meet its criteria for effective Outside Director contribution. Therefore, the Board opposes the proposal in favor of its own nominee.

PIRC analysis: Shareholders have the right to nominate director candidates, and proposals that aim to diversify board skills and perspectives are welcomed. In this case, the proponent has put forward a candidate with relevant experience in semiconductor engineering and capital markets. However, based on the available information, there is limited detail regarding the candidate's governance experience, leadership capabilities, or specific contributions to board-level decision-making. The company has outlined a formal nomination process conducted by an independent advisory committee and has indicated that its current board composition already includes expertise in the relevant strategic areas. In the absence of more comprehensive disclosure on how the nominee would add unique value beyond the existing board skill set, it is reasonable to maintain the current structure. Opposition is recommended.

2. Amendment of Article of Association

It is proposed to amend the Articles of Incorporation to introduce multiple classes of Bond-Type Class Shares alongside existing common shares. The amendments define these shares' rights, including preferred and interim dividends, priority in liquidation, and acquisition terms, while excluding voting rights. Additional provisions cover class meetings, share allotments, and payment calculations. While this structure may offer financial flexibility, it raises governance concerns due to the absence of voting rights, extensive board discretion, and limited protections for minority and common shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Prohibit Former Employees from Serving as Directors of Listed Affiliates

Proponent's argument: This proposal seeks to amend the Articles of Incorporation to prohibit former directors or employees of the Company or its subsidiaries and affiliates (with five or more years of service) from being appointed as directors of any listed subsidiary or listed affiliate. The shareholder contends that such appointments, particularly where the individual lacks relevant industry expertise, risk mismanagement and persistent undervaluation of affiliates, thereby harming the Company's own corporate and shareholder value. The proponent highlights concerns regarding the Company's influence over AFC-a listed affiliate whose PBR has been below 1x for over a decade-and the appointment of a former executive lacking real estate or capital allocation expertise as its senior executive. Such "amakudari" practices, according to the proponent, distort group governance, lead to inefficient capital deployment, and undermine the interests of minority shareholders. The resolution aims to prevent such scenarios by prohibiting long-serving former insiders from becoming directors at listed affiliates, thereby ensuring more meritocratic and independent governance structures across the corporate group.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal, arguing that blanket restrictions on director appointments would unnecessarily constrain the Company's ability to make case-by-case judgments in line with shareholder interests. The Company states that it already assesses each proposed director of its listed affiliates based on their qualifications, the board's overall skill composition, and the presence of independent directors. These evaluations are conducted to support long-term value creation. The Board also affirms that the final decision on director appointments at affiliates lies with their respective boards, often following independent committee reviews. It contends that codifying a rigid exclusion rule into the Articles would undermine necessary flexibility and limit prudent governance discretion, ultimately impeding efficient business operations. The Company emphasises that it does not currently have any listed subsidiaries and refrains from direct involvement in the decision-making processes of listed affiliates.

PIRC analysis: This resolution seeks to prohibit the company from supporting the appointment of any individual who has served five years or more as a director or employee of the parent group to a board position at any listed subsidiary or affiliate. While the proposal raises valid concerns about the risks of "amakudari" and its potential to misalign incentives or damage minority shareholder interests, a blanket prohibition is overly rigid. Former directors or employees may bring valuable institutional knowledge and strategic continuity, which can be beneficial if appropriately balanced by robust independent oversight. The key safeguard should be the independence, transparency, and effectiveness of the board selection process at the subsidiary or affiliate level. If boards are majority independent, and nominations are subject to transparent review and shareholder approval, the risk of entrenchment or underperformance can be mitigated without blanket bans. Effective governance frameworks, rather than hard restrictions, are better suited to addressing concerns around revolving-door appointments. Opposition is recommended.

TBS HOLDINGS INC AGM - 27-06-2025

8. Shareholder Resolution: Mandate 60% Dividend Payout Ratio Based on Annual Net Income

Proponent's argument: The proponent requests that the Company amend its dividend policy to distribute a minimum 60% of annual net income as dividends. This formula-based proposal would ensure that a portion of retained earnings is allocated more directly to shareholders, calculated as ¥124 per share minus the amount proposed by the board, with adjustments to ensure alignment with a 60% payout ratio. The rationale emphasises that the Company has persistently underperformed on ROE, averaging below 3% over the past five years and expected to fall below 2% in FY2025. In the absence of sufficient capital discipline, the Company has not met the expectations of the Tokyo Stock Exchange regarding management conscious of capital cost and valuation. The proposal argues that without firm payout mechanisms, it will be difficult to reach an 8% ROE, even with stronger performance from the Media and Content business. Establishing a payout floor would, in the view of the proponent, foster more efficient capital use and improve overall shareholder value.

Company's response: The company response is not provided in the materials supplied by the proponent. However, based on standard practice and precedent, companies typically oppose such formulaic dividend mandates on the basis that dividend decisions should remain the discretion of the board, considering multiple factors including capital needs, growth investments, earnings volatility, and macroeconomic risk. A rigid payout structure may reduce the Company's ability to respond to unforeseen events, impair balance sheet resilience, and constrain long-term value creation.

PIRC analysis: While the promotion of long-term capital efficiency and improved ROE are legitimate aims, this proposal introduces a rigid dividend payout mechanism that would constrain the board's ability to make balanced capital allocation decisions. Dividend policy must remain at the discretion of the board, which is best placed to assess the company's financial position, investment needs, risk exposure, and long-term strategic goals. Binding the company to a fixed 60% payout ratio could impair flexibility, particularly during periods of earnings volatility or macroeconomic uncertainty. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9. Shareholder Resolution: Acquisition of Treasury Stock Linked to Return Target

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes that the company acquire up to 15 million shares of its common stock for a total of ¥54 billion within one year, as part of a broader capital return strategy aimed at achieving an 8% return on equity (ROE). This initiative is presented alongside a dividend proposal and is framed as a mechanism to raise capital efficiency. The proponent argues that, despite the company holding over ¥1 trillion in net assets and a sizeable investment portfolio, its ROE has remained under 3% in the past five years and is projected to fall below 2% in the current fiscal year. By returning excess capital to shareholders, the company can address market concerns regarding weak capital productivity and enhance long-term corporate value. The proponent believes such actions will not compromise the company's ability to pursue content-related growth investments and urges a stronger capital discipline framework until an 8% ROE is consistently achieved.

Company's response: The Board of Directors opposes the proposal. It argues that its existing capital policy, outlined in the Medium-Term Business Plan 2026, already prioritizes both shareholder returns and growth investment. The company has returned approximately ¥16.9 billion to shareholders in FY2024 and projects around ¥35 billion in FY2025 through dividends and buybacks, surpassing its three-year TSR target of ¥60 billion. The board views the proponent's proposed return of ¥74 billion in FY2025 as excessive and believes it would constrain necessary investments, particularly in competitive content IP markets. The board asserts that disciplined, flexible capital allocation aligned with strategic goals is essential to sustainable value creation. It maintains that capital management decisions should remain with the board to ensure balanced execution of long-term financial and operational strategies. Therefore, the proposal is deemed inconsistent with enhancing long-term corporate value.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent, and compelling case demonstrating how the proposed share buyback would deliver tangible long-term benefits for shareholders. While the stated aim is to enhance capital efficiency and corporate value, the justification relies heavily on general assertions about excess capital and ROE targets, without clearly addressing the strategic trade-offs or how such a measure would be superior to the company's current capital allocation approach. In the absence of a compelling rationale and with capital management best left to the discretion of the board, an oppose vote is recommended.

EVRAZ PLC AGM - 27-06-2025

1. Elect Roman Nikishin - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director. Not considered independent owing to lack of transparency arising from the failure to provide an audited Annual Report for the year under review, as well as for several previous years of business: PIRC's voting guidelines stress the critical importance of transparency and accountability, particularly through the disclosure of audited financial statements. EVRAZ plc has confirmed it was unable to publish its annual report or audited financials for the year ended 31 December 2024 due to sanctions and the lack of an appointed auditor following a resignation. This constitutes non-compliance with the UK Corporate Governance Code, as the Board admitted it could not legally approve unaudited accounts. In line with its guidelines, PIRC would regard the absence of audited financial disclosures as a serious governance failure and will therefore oppose the election of all directors for not ensuring adequate financial reporting.

It is considered that all companies should aim to provide at least 20 working days notice for general meetings in order to give shareholders sufficient time to consider what are often complex issues. Additionally, owing to the failure to provide an audited Annual Report for the year under review, there are serious concerns around transparency, and on this basis, abstention is recommended.

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 16 yen per share is proposed, and the dividend payout ratio is approximately 109.1%. At more than 100% payout, it is considered unwise given the capital maintenance needs of the company.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Prohibit Former Financial Regulators from Board Appointment

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes amending the Articles of Incorporation to prohibit the appointment of former bureaucrats from financial or regulatory agencies to the Board of Directors. This follows a case where a director previously a senior official at the Kanto Local Finance Bureau resigned shortly after appointment and joined another company. The proponent views such appointments as potentially compromising independence and accountability, especially when these individuals come from agencies that issue regulatory guidance like the Corporate Governance Code. The proposal criticizes the board's handling of this resignation and its vague commitment to rectify board composition, arguing that relying on former regulators undermines both public confidence and the principle of board independence.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, stating that directors should be selected based on a range of factors including skills, experience, and insight not excluded on the basis of their professional background. The Board considers it inappropriate to limit director eligibility through blanket exclusions in the Articles of Incorporation, which are intended to set high-level governance principles. It argues that such a restriction could prevent the appointment of otherwise highly qualified individuals. The Board maintains that director nominations should remain flexible to ensure a diverse and capable leadership team, and therefore recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: The proposal to ban former financial regulators from board roles raises valid concerns about independence, but amending the Articles of Incorporation is an overly rigid approach. While the resignation of an ex-regulator as Audit Committee member highlights governance risks, director appointments should be assessed on merit, not automatically barred. Opposition is recommended.

10. Shareholder Resolution: Prohibit Retired Employees from Serving as Outside Directors at Related Companies

Proponent's argument: This proposal seeks to amend the Articles of Incorporation to prohibit retired employees of Iyogin Holdings from serving as outside directors at companies that are borrowers or significant shareholders. The proponent raises concerns about potential conflicts of interest and governance quality, referencing the appointment of a retired Iyo Bank employee as an outside director at Daiki Axis-a company with limited public float and strong family control. The proposal highlights concerns about legacy relationships and inadequate oversight, particularly when such appointments may reinforce insular governance at firms with hereditary leadership and financial instability. The shareholder argues that as a public institution, the bank should uphold higher governance standards in line with Tokyo Stock Exchange reforms focused on board independence and accountability.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, asserting that former employees retain the right to pursue roles such as outside directorships after retirement. It argues that there is no justifiable reason to impose a blanket restriction on such appointments, especially when they occur outside the company. The Board also notes that the Articles of Incorporation are intended to cover fundamental governance structures, and that such specific rules do not belong in this document. It maintains that imposing such limitations would be inappropriate and could unfairly restrict the career opportunities of former employees. The Board therefore recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: Concerns about potential conflicts of interest involving retired employees serving as outside directors at related companies are valid. However, introducing a blanket prohibition through the Articles of Incorporation is not considered the most effective or proportionate approach. Each appointment should be assessed on its individual merits, taking into account the candidate's independence, qualifications, and the governance context of the external company. Broader restrictions could unintentionally exclude experienced individuals who may offer valuable oversight capabilities. Such matters are better addressed through nomination guidelines and board evaluation processes rather than rigid rules embedded in the Articles. Opposition is recommended.

11. Shareholder Resolution: Dismiss Director Hirohisa Senba

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposes dismissing Director Hirohisa Senba, criticizing his stance on cross-shareholdings and shareholder returns. The proponent argues that Mr. Senba has shown insufficient concern for the company's high cross-shareholding ratio (50.8%) and its effect on ROE and PBR, which remains low at 0.53. The proposal also points to recent scandals and questions Mr. Senba's role in overseeing capital allocation, including perceived excessive spending on a new head office and maintaining modest dividend levels. Comparisons to higher dividends at other regional banks are used to argue that Mr. Senba is out of touch with shareholder interests and has not advocated for meaningful returns or reform.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, defending Mr. Senba's contribution to governance and strategic oversight. It states that since his appointment, he has drawn on substantial operational experience and demonstrated sound judgment on key management matters. The Board affirms that he is fulfilling his responsibilities effectively and contributing to the long-term value creation of the group. As such, the Board does not support the proposal to remove him from the Board and recommends a vote against the resolution.

PIRC analysis: Shareholders have the right to hold directors accountable, and concerns about capital allocation, dividend policy, or cross-shareholdings are valid topics for engagement. However, the dismissal of an individual director should follow a clear and justified process, with a regular director nomination and re-election process providing shareholders with an appropriate opportunity to evaluate a director's performance and vote accordingly. Opposition is recommended.

SUMITOMO MITSUI FINANCIAL GROUP AGM - 27-06-20255. Shareholder Resolution: Set Fixed Year-End Dividend at ¥70 per Share for FY2025

Proponent's argument: This proposal requests that the Company distribute a year-end dividend of ¥70 per share for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2025. The proponent argues that while the Company executed a ¥250 billion share buyback in FY2024, this had little positive impact on the stock price. Given the limited efficacy of buybacks particularly when small relative to market capitalisation the proponent argues that a stronger dividend policy would deliver more visible value to shareholders. Emphasising the ongoing uncertainty in global markets, they assert that stable, higher dividend payments would signal financial prudence and long-term soundness. They also highlight that the Company's strong financial performance in FY2024, including a 98% achievement of forecasted net profit by Q3, justifies a higher dividend payout. The proposed amount would improve yield and help sustain shareholder confidence, particularly among long-term retail and institutional investors who prioritise steady returns.

Company's response: The Board opposes the proposal. It states that SMBC already maintains a "progressive dividend policy" aimed at maintaining or increasing dividends even in periods of declining profits, and targets a 40% payout ratio. In FY2024, the Company increased its dividend by 35% year-on-year, alongside ¥250 billion in buybacks raising the total payout ratio above 60%. For FY2025, it plans further dividend growth to ¥136 per share. The Company contends that share buybacks remain essential for improving capital efficiency, ROE, and EPS, particularly while the share price remains undervalued. Flexibility in capital allocation-between dividends and buybacks is considered vital to achieving long-term value creation and balance sheet soundness. The proposed fixed dividend would compromise this balance and hinder SMBC's capital policy responsiveness. The Board believes the current approach has been consistently communicated and supported by shareholders and should be maintained.

PIRC analysis: Decisions on the level and timing of dividend payments are considered to be a matter for the board, which is best placed to assess the company's financial position, capital requirements, and strategic priorities. While dividend stability is important, mandating a specific distribution level risks constraining the board's ability to manage capital flexibly, especially under changing market conditions or regulatory developments. The company's existing progressive dividend policy, supported by share buybacks, appears to strike a reasonable balance between shareholder returns and financial prudence. Opposition is recommended.

JGC CORP AGM - 27-06-20251. Appropriation of Surplus

Japanese companies seek specific authority for the appropriation of any surplus in earnings and this authority includes any distribution of a dividend. The approach to such resolutions rests on the degree to which the dividend payout ratio is in line with the level of distribution which investors could reasonably expect. A dividend of 40 yen per share is proposed, however, the Company made a net loss in the year under review. It is considered unwise to pay a dividend in this instance given the capital maintenance needs of the company.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Dismiss Representative Director NOU Takeshi

Proponent's argument: The shareholder proposal calls for the dismissal of Mr. NOU Takeshi from his position as Representative Director. The proponent cites the company's inadequate response to the historic Itai-itai disease, alleging insufficient compensation to affected victims. It argues that the continued leadership of Mr. NOU reflects a failure to take appropriate responsibility for past environmental harm, particularly regarding cadmium leakage linked to the disease. The proponent deems this lack of adequate redress a serious failure of accountability and leadership, making Mr. NOU unfit to continue in his role. The resolution does not contest Mr. NOU's operational experience but centers its argument on ethical responsibility and the reputational impact of unresolved historical grievances.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, affirming its confidence in Mr. NOU Takeshi's qualifications and leadership. It highlights his significant experience in both established and emerging business areas, including his role in launching new growth-focused initiatives. Mr. NOU has served as President and Representative Director since 2021 and is credited with steering the company toward sustainable growth and long-term value creation. His appointment, the company notes, is in line with formal criteria developed in consultation with the Nomination Review Committee, chaired by an Outside Director. Regarding the Itai-itai disease, the company states it has already settled compensation matters with victim groups, concluding a comprehensive agreement in 2013. The Board asserts that this issue has been appropriately addressed and does not justify the dismissal of the current Representative Director.

PIRC analysis: Shareholders should retain the right to express views on the composition of the board, including through proposals concerning director appointments or dismissals. However, such resolutions should be supported by clear, recent evidence demonstrating a failure in leadership or governance. While the historical impact of the Itai-itai disease is acknowledged, the company states that a settlement was reached in 2013, and no new information has been presented indicating ongoing accountability concerns. His appointment has also undergone review through a formal nomination process. Opposition is recommended.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Set Annual Dividend at ¥500 per Share

Proponent's argument: The proposal requests that the company pay an annual dividend of ¥500 per share, split into two ¥250 payments. The proponent suggests this would be positively received by shareholders but does not provide further financial justification. The intent appears to be to increase shareholder returns through higher dividend payouts.

Company's response: The company opposes the proposal, citing its dividend policy of maintaining a 3.0% consolidated DOE to balance stable returns with reinvestment needs. It emphasizes the importance of funding upcoming strategic initiatives under its Medium-Term Plan and Vision 2030, including growth investments and M&A. The Board believes the proposed dividend level could limit future flexibility and therefore recommends voting against the proposal.

PIRC analysis: While dividend payments are an important aspect of shareholder returns, decisions regarding the level and timing of dividends should remain at the discretion of the board. The board is best positioned to assess the company's financial needs, investment plans, and long-term strategy. Mandating a specific dividend amount, as proposed, may limit flexibility and affect the company's ability to allocate capital effectively. As the company already has a stated dividend policy and is planning a future update, this resolution is considered overly prescriptive.

ANSYS INC AGM - 27-06-20251C.. *Re-elect Jim Frankola - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

Vote Cast: Oppose

1E.. Re-elect Ronald W. Hovsepian - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and member of the Compensation and Nominating and Corporate Governance Committees. The Chair is not considered to be independent due to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. It is also considered that these Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

1G.. Re-elect Ravi K. Vijayaraghavan - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. Non-Executive Director and chair of the nomination committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the Chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The level of gender diversity on the board is below 33%, which does not align with best practices for diverse board representation. Given the Nomination Committee's responsibility for board composition and diversity oversight, the Chair of the Committee bears accountability for this shortfall. As the Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2.. Appoint the Auditors

Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 77.92% of audit fees during the year under review and 71.87% on a three-year aggregate basis. AON PLC AGM - 27-06-2025

1.01. Elect Lester B. Knight - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Governance/Nominating Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Furthermore, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Governance/Nominating Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the Chair. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. The director also received significant opposition of more than 10% of the votes cast, and the company has not disclosed the steps taken to address discontent with shareholders.

As the Company does not have a board elected sustainability committee, the Chair of the Board is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

7.. Authorise the Board to Opt-Out of Statutory Pre-Emption Rights Under Irish Law

It is proposed to exclude pre-emption rights on shares issued under the previous resolution at this meeting. The corresponding authority for issuing shares without pre-emptive rights, requested in a previous proposal, exceeds guidelines (10%). Opposition is thus recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

8.. Approve the Amended 2011 Incentive Plan and Increase the Number of Shares Available for Issuance

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

5.. Amend Articles: Officer Exculpation

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. On balance, opposition is recommended.
